by writing reports on assigned readings over sources and methods in New Testament theology research and leading the seminar in discussion of issues related to their reading.
3. Students will demonstrate basic familiarity with significant issues involved in contemporary New Testament theology research by: (1) writing a research paper summarizing and critiquing a contemporary scholar or a

Optional Books

Course Teaching Methodology
This course will involve students reading assigned books and journals, preparing assigned reports, participating in scholarly discussion, and writing and presenting assigned papers. The professors will guide the students in completing this process.

Course Requirements
Reading Reports. The purpose of the book review is to introduce the seminar to the content of the book and to situate the content in the field of New Testament theology research. Students need to understand the background out of which statements arise. If the background of a particular section in the book is unclear, students may need to consult additional resources, including scholarly reviews of the book, to help understand the author’s point. Students should include a summary and critique of the material covered.

Research Paper. Research papers must be submitted one week before the paper will be presented in seminar. They will be submitted electronically via DropBox and Blackboard no later than 5:00 PM on the day they are due. No hard copies of papers will be required. The topic for the research paper must be approved by the professors. Submit an explanatory paragraph via email; discuss briefly the rationale for the paper and the methodology to be used.

Paper Responses. Every student will turn in a response to each paper presented, as well as a formal response to one paper, which will be assigned by the professors. The informal responses will be placed in the appropriate Drop Box folder and will be used by the student to guide discussion of the paper. This response will include a point of appreciation, a point of disagreement or concern, a content question (What did you mean?), and a discussion question (What about . . .?). These responses will not exceed one page, single-spaced.

The formal response will be read to the seminar after the paper presentation. The response will not contain a summary of the content of the paper but will be divided into five sections: what worked in the paper; what didn’t work in the paper; what is unclear; what else could have been included; and a comprehensive errata section. These response should be 3 to 5 pages in length.

Both the shorter responses and the formal response should be professional, polite, and critical. We learn more from people pointing out our weaknesses than we learn from people telling us how nice we are. Both types of responses must be submitted before the beginning of the seminar at which the paper will be discussed.

Final Exam. The final exam will consist two projects: a personal perspective on New Testament theology and a syllabus outline for teaching a course in New Testament theology. These items are due the last seminar meeting of the semester and will be discussed at that time.

Evaluation of Grade
The student's grade will be computed as follows:
Reading Reports  15%
Research Paper 40%
Paper Responses  20%
Required texts  10%
Final Exam  15%
