INFANTS-BAPTISME:

Wherein Baptisme is declared to ingraft us into Christ, before any preparation: And the Covenant of the Gospel to Abraham and the Gentiles is proved to be frome extended to the Gentiles children, as well as to Abrahams:

Together with the Reason why Baptize children, is not so plainly set down in the Gospel, as Circumcis'd children, in the Law, and yet the Gospel more plain then the Law.

Mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises.

Courteous Reader,

Having read and seen the Labours of divers learned men that have undertaken the handling of this point; and seeing that this Doctrine of Anabaptists doth much spread, notwithstanding all the industry that hath been used by men of singular parts and piety; I did wonder that such a growing evil should spread and prevail with men that did pretend so much to piety; and finding that they cry up the authority of the Scripture, as if men that did stand for baptism of children, had nothing to countenance their doctrine but unmane authority, and set up mens inventions contrary to the Scriptures: when I saw that these Anabaptists did so earnestly plead for the authority of Scripture, and declare themselves so devoted to the rule of Gods Word, I did complain on the affectors of these men, willingly granting that what was indeed the rule we ought all to be guided by, I did also unparcially sift, law truly and factfully they had dealt in the applying themselves to this sacred rule: I perceived that they did rather steal away the hearts of men with the show only of pretended respect unto the Scripture, than by a lively d with a放aged spirits search into the sense and meaning of the Holy Ghost, as men dejevous to be lead by the authority of God. I heard men cry scripture, scripture, nothing would prevail with them but scripture. I refused to concur with them in this, that the Scripture and only Scripture ought to be our rule, in these supernaturall things of Gods worship; and if I could have found that they did argue rightly out of scripture, I should have most willingly joyed with them, but examining the sincerity of their dealing herein, I saw them carried on with a spirit of pride, imagining that because children had been baptized, and that those men which had maintained childrens baptism, had maintained other errors ; therefore in the affliction that they bear unto former times , they were resolved to wrap up baptisms of children among other things, and throw out it also the worship of God : they could not endure man's inventions in God's worship, and wherein their zeal was good, if their knowledge had been answerable : but here I saw much pride, vailed under the cloak of purity, men carrying on their opinions with opposition and clamour of multitudes, rather than with liberty and diligent enquiry into the state of the question : But whether I saw this blemish, was dreading in the lower region of the unlearned, I did not so much wonder, though I were much moved for their sakes because their souls were as precious to me as other mens, yet when I heard that it soared aloft among the learned, I thought it then high time to before my self, to search into the ground and reason, why they also with others might be deceived in that point : wherein I took some pains to search into the cause, and how for the publick good given some small account thereof : and here I will turne keeping with Mr. Tombes, and examine whether our books have stated on the question of baptism so high enough, and have sufficiently cleared those Scriptures that are cited in the controversy. For my part, I confess that the maine reason that hath so much prevailed with the multitude, is, because the ceremony of circumcision being put down, and that being required of the Jews : so as that every circumstance of time, qualification of the person in express, he must be a male in the family of some believer & no such plainness is used in the matter of the Sacrament of baptism ; for want whereof, ignorant persons have proclaimed the baptism of Infants, will-worship, because it is not said in plain terms, ye shall baptize children ; thus may be an excuse to men at first sight and consideration, but upon nearer enquiry, let us consider, whether the different manner of the phrase between the Gospel and the Law, hath not put the difference. The service of the Law was in shadows and types ; therefore the extermal rite was plain for the use of them : the authority of God did fall upon the rite it self immediately, without any other explication, but that it was the confirmation and seal of the Covenant made with Abraham and his seed, whereby they were made partakers of the blessing in Christ, the seed of Abraham : Now, the Gospel doth declare the promise to Abraham more plainly, and our ingrafting into Christ by baptism more distinctly, according to the nature of the sacrament ; and in a more rational way, entitling us to the promise, requiring the Ministers of the Gospel to baptize all nations, males and females : without any limitation of years or sex, whereby the offerer of grace is made to all nations : the seal of that offerer is baptism, whereby we are ingrafted into Christ, the promised seed, the promise of the Gospel is plainly declared to be the promise made to Abraham, enlarged at in itself, but by virtue of more ample dispensation : the promise to Abraham is not only to Abraham and his seed, but to all nations of the earth, though by Providence before Christ, kept within the nation of the Jews. The ignorance, or non attendance on this different manner of administration have caused men to rigourously require such express direction in points of administration of the sacrament of baptism : and by this means brought themselves into such difficulty, that if they should stand to their principles, they could not finde out any way to administer the sacrament of baptism at all, unto any person whatsoever, for want of more plaine and particular direction : And true, while they go about to insist upon the Letter, and require the regulation of the Ordinance of Christ, to their own fancy, they make the Gospel more obscure than the Law, contrary to the known declaration of the Gospel which proclaimeth it more plain and full, more distinct and clear, then the cleasy, meek, and childlike manifistations of the Law : The Law saith circumcise a childe at eight daies old in the family of Abraham, or any other believer ; but all nations, saith the Gospel : circumcise males, saith the Law ; males and females saith the Gospel : circumcise, this is my Covenant, saith the Law most obscurely ; baptize into Christ, by whom we have access by faith into grace, Rom. 5. 2. most plainly saith the Gospel : The Law groeth the ceremony therein most obscurely, wrapping up the promise of Christ, the Gospel promiseth Christ most plainly, and most rationally drawing after it the sacrament of baptism ; children are in Christ by election of grace, before they are born, this is plainly set down in the Gospel, but obscurely intimated in the Law. Now, sacramentally men are ingrafted into Christ by baptism, but personally to judge men faithful, and thereby in Christ, before they were ingrafted into him, were a contradiction in adjecto; therefore were men appointed to baptize and preach the Word as being able to administer externals only. The second definition is, that they interpret the histories of the acts of the Apostles, wherein bisciscly is related, that persons baptized did believe, not that confession, or profession of faith was made to the Apostles; and that the persons baptized had their faith approved by the Apostles; and that that was the ground upon which they baptized them, which is a plain addition to the Scripture:

But my earnest request to Mr. Tombes, and all other Anabaptists, is to look on the doctrine of the Gospel, in a more spiritual way, shew it subject it to such a grave and earnest apprehension, and find out some means in a more satisfactory way to state the premise of the Gospel according to the Word of God, than heretofore.

Yours in the Lord,
William Hussey.

I have perused this Answer to Mr. Tombes his Book against Pedobaptisme, or the

I do allow it to be printed and published.

TO Mr. Tombes his sceptical Exercitation Concerning Infants-Baptisme.

He Method that I shall take in the handling this Controverte shall be, first, to state the Doctrine of Baptisme, as it was delivered by Christ, and understood by the Apostles, as may appear by their practice; then answer the fophimes and fallacies of Anabaptists, and in particular of Mr. Tombes; and lastly, some arguments to prove the lawfulness of children's baptism: As for the baptism of John, it was of God; God sent him to baptize, but as the Ministry, to the Baptisme of John was perform'd, begun and ended in him; he was not a Minister of the Gospel, he was the servant of the Prophets, but the leaf in the kingdom of Heaven is greater than he; he was precursor, the forerunner of Christ, of whose baptism the Scripture is so silent, (if you consider the form and nature of it) that we may quickly affirm more of it than we can be able to prove: As for Christ making Disciples, and his Disciples baptizing, the Scripture likewise speaketh little, only that Christ made Disciples, and his Disciples baptized them: during the time of Christ's abode upon earth, he did all things well, but some things he did which he was not pleased to reveal to us, what is written is written for our learning; and so much is written, as by believing we may have eternal life.

In things that are liable to no difficulty, a greater liberty of words is used: as,
Go preach the Gospel to every creature; here men cannot easily mistake, because none are capable of the Gospel but reasonable creatures: So in the Commission, Christ saith, Make Disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father Son and holy Ghost. Here Christ giveth a Commission to make all nations his scholars, baptizing them, and teaching them what he commands: Here our Sawicr is plain in the manner and form of Baptisme that was new and unknowne : concerning the doctrine they shold teach , he relleth them , he will give speciall command what they shold teach , and for the subject, that being before limited to Jews , is now extended to the Gentiles also : but what shold be the qualifikation of persons to be baptiz'd is not said , neither doth the Apophles any where declare , or give any thing in charge to Timothy or Titus, (to whom St. Paul wrote) as unto Ministers of the Goffel, to acquaint them with their duty as matter of any difficulty wherein they might eaffly fall : and in 1 Cor. 1. he by occasion speaking of Baptisme , specketh of that , as of a thing confidg in form of words , and outward rite of washing , (so as it is ministerially to be performed) wherein no such difficulty was , or danger of mislike ; and therefore he had little care therof even of meaner qualifications might do that ; yet were the Corinthians baptiz'd before he wrote to them , and a Church ; In all the dogmatical parts of Scripture , one word concerning any direction to the Minister whom he shold baptize , whereby it is plain , that Christ did not charge his Disciples with any danger of mislike in baptizing , they shold teach what Christ had or shold command , for matter of doctrine ; and Christ doth reffre the committifh to future direction ; but in all the scripture no farther explanation concerning the perhets that were to be baptiz'd . The Churches were baptiz'd no man knowes by whom . To Churches and Saints , men received into the Church is all the doctrine of the Aephles directed , whereby it appears , that they had care to teach all that Christ by his Spirit did command : but to little is spoken concerning the persons to be baptiz'd , or the manner of administration , more then in the commission : that it may plainly appear , no controveries were raised concerning that : it was a plain case wherein they walked , without dispute ; or , if seemeth , suspcion of controverie , though light enough given to the truth ; so that Antipedobaptists , without offending against plain Scripture , can have no ground to oppoſe the baptisme of infants by those learned and groundles arguments which they urge against it ; and certaintly , it was long ere much was said , and the strength of that which is said , will appear . What is gathered out of the commission , Go, make Disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, teaching them, &c. we shall consider :

Nations is the subject , that is to cleer , that Mr. Tombes confesseth it , though with this limitation , nations that are made Disciples ; which limitation can receive no colour without apparent alteration of the words . First , make them Disciples , and then baptize them , saith Mr. Tombes ; three words are added , (for, and, then,) the words plainly import , make Disciples by baptizing them and teaching . I have added nothing but the word by ; and that is implied in the particull preffix , as they appear to all English men that understand their own tongue : as in the like phrase ; make , or build houses , laying the foundations on the rock , and raising the walls and roof of lasting and durable matter , do not these particules expref the manner of doing ? or , may a man gather from hence that the houſe muſt be buil before the foundation muſt be laid ? Again , the word nations , is a Nōne of multitude , and the very commiffion leemeth to point at the nation of the Jewes for the pattern , that they shold call other nations into covenant with God everafter the fame manner as the Jewes have been , by vertue of the fame promife ; and thus it is apparent , the Apophles all understand it . Paul , both to the Romans , Rom 4.11. and Gal 3.17. doth argue , that the promise might stand the fane to us , as was to Abraham , though circumfection be fallen away , for as much as the promife was before circumfection , even to Abraham ; and there might remain the circumfection of the heart , though the outward circumfection were taken away , and Baptisme put in the place of it , and from this promife , Act 2.39. S. Peter argueth to Baptisme , the promise belongeth to you , therefore be baptiz'd . If then Baptisme may be tendered to nations , nations may receive baptisme , that is , may be , may , it muſt be received by a national covenant , the nation of the Jewes were only in covenant with God before Christ ; but all nations after Christ hath broken down the partition wall . Now principally a national covenant doth conſit in this , that the moſt principall of the nation do covenant for the reſt , the moſe conſiderable paro do receive for the reſt , and require performance of oþeris their inferiours . God laid circumfection upon the Jewes under a penalty , which is a national way of receiving : God commandeth all to be circumfected by a Law , under a penalty , that perh that was not circumfected , shall be cut off , Gen 17.14. that the whole nation might be circumfected . If any ſhall object , that the Jewes were all to be circumfected under a penalty , but the penalty was appointed of God . Taffwer , that was an eſpeciall privilege of the Jewes , that they had their civil Lawes from God , but what leſt upon a nation as a diuity , that it may require of all , and cut off them that refue , and this is implied in the commiffion , when nations muſt covenant to be Disciples , which may be done by a part for the whole , then are fuch at are in communion from Christ commanded to baptize and teach the whole nation , fuch as are in authority may covenant in a national way for the inferior part , and fully require all external performances from them , fuch as Baptisme , and ſubmition to be taught are ; as for faith , and internal performance , no creature can judge of that , or require it of another in a judicial way .

If any object that the Apophles did not execute their commiffion , but upon ſuch parties as did believe , and would be baptiz'd .

I anſwer , a commiffion cannot be executed in full extent , untill opportunity be gotten ; he that hath a commiffion to lunge up all the thives in the kingdom , muſt execute it as he may ; he muſt hang them as he can catch them : as ſoon as they could procure a national willingneſſe , they were ready to baptize them , as

by the many thousands baptized by them the same day of their conversion may appear, taking them in by families, which act by a rational way, the master of the family covenanting for his servants and children : So Joh. 24. 15. I and my house will serve the Lord; he may not believe for his servants, but he may covenant for external worship for his son, under a penalty, and for his servant according to his condition, under penalty, or dismission of service, that the whole family or nation might come in : And that the Gentiles should in such a manner flow into the Church, the Prophets do fully testify, Isa. 2. 2. All nations shall flow, &c. See further what light the word Disciple doth give to this sense of the commission. Disciple is a relative, and is referred to master, to him that giveth precepts, which have factions of reward, and punishment annexed ; and this is the covenant that is between the master and the scholar, that he will teach and punish the negligence of the scholar, the scholar must be under the covenant of submission, or otherwise he can be no scholar.

Now, note that two ways this covenant of a scholar may be put upon any person : First, it may be put on with the content of the scholar ; or, secondly, without, in case of a slave, his Lord may impose what covenants he pleaseth, without his content, if he will live and enjoy his being, the father may, and that justly, by his interest, that he hath over his son by nature, put him to school, and make a scholar of him, even before he be willing to consent ; he may justly carry him, and correct him, if he refuse to be put under the power of Schoolmaster, giving his Schoolmaster power to correct him. Now, to send him to school to Christ, and teach him the precepts of Christ, and this imposed on the parent of Christ, by his Apostles, Eph. 6. 4. And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath : but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. And what a parent can do over his child in matter of duty, that may the parents of the country, the Magistrates, require of the nation. God requireth it of them, they may put all the nation to school to Christ. Now, what if some of them be too young to learn, yet if they be under the discipline of the Master, they are scholars as may appear in many little children that are set to school, to keep them safe, and from wantonness, before they be of capacity to learn, many have a hornbook given, more for a play-game, than a book, yet are they scholars, because under the discipline and correction of the Master : is it not therefore great reason, that a Christian should dedicate his childe to Christ, to be partaker of the blessing and discipline of Christ ? surely godliness hath the promise of this life, and that which is to come. What is the infant capable of no good from Christ ? neither in foul nor body ? hath Christ nothing to do with him ? Christ did bleste fucking Infans, and as he blesteth, cannot he like wife punish at pleasure ? Why then, if he hath power over all nations, and de jure, they are all under his discipline, may not Christian parents put their children under the tuition of Christ, seeing, though they cannot learn, yet he can bleffe, and hath right, and will punishe, which we by baptizing our Infants do but acknowledge, nay, certaintly he is an Infidell that doth not think that Christ can teach the Infant by his Spirit, though we cannot by means that we can use, or that he doth not qualifie the souls of the elect Infants, with gifts of grace, nor given to reprobates, if they die in infancy, which though he can, and will without baptism ; yet this is sufficient encouragement for a Christian parent to put his fee to school to Christ, If Christ can teach him, this were a vain thing to think for any ignorant parent to refuse to put his son to school, because he understandeth not Latine or Greek himself ; it is sufficient that the Master understandeth and knoweth how to teach. And certaintly, words could not have been invented that could have required the Ministers to baptize all the world, Infants and all, willing or unwilling ; so that any word for they might be taught, and submisse to the precepts and discipline of Christ, then to expresse it by the word Nations, and Disciple ; and this was plain to them that understood what it was for a nation to be in covenant with God, whereof there was but one pattern at that time, and so it doth appear the Apostles did understand it as a plain thing in chart, though often they took occasion to speak of baptism, yet never did explain this point concerning childrens baptism, as thinking it plain enough in the pattern what might justly rule a scripture concerning the baptizing of women, seeing they were not commanded, that is, declared in plain terms, both men and women were baptized. Baptisme is an room of circumcision, as in answering Mr. Tombes his arguments, I hope to make appear. For the further understanding of this word Disciple, I shall endeavour to let forth the full latitude of the word : the formal reason of a Disciple, is in relation ad Preceptorem, the foundation of which relation is a covenant between the Master and the scholar, whereby the Master is engaged to deliver precepts, and the scholar is bound to hear and undergo the penalties of his errors and contempts.

New this covenant is either imposed, as in case of a slave, when a Lord doth lay any covenances upon his slave ; here the benefits of the covenant be mercies, the punishments, if he be then the greatest, or under any conditions avoidable, are favors, to Nea. 3. 1 Sam. 11.2, rendered a covenant to put out every one of the Israelites right eyes, which if he had been able to have destroyed, as he conceived he was, had been a favour ; in this case one party maketh the covenant without mentioning the other but as pasture ; therefore, Gen. 15. 18. God is said to make a covenant with Abraham, and 17. 9. God calleth the covenant, his covenant, God made the promise and conditions, not Abraham, but in Gen. 21. 27. there, when Abraham and Abimelech did covenant, the Text faileth, they both made a covenant, Abraham his conditions, and Abimelech his.

If the word Disciple be taken in this sense, then it is no more, but tell all nations, that I am that Prophet that was promised by Moses, Deut. 18. 18. 19. and thus

An Answer to Mr. Tombes

William Hussey, 1647

thus Peter Acts 3: and Stephen Acts 7: did make disciples, repeating those words of Moses, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise to you like unto me, him shall you hear; and he that will not hear the voice of that Prophet shall dye the death; and then these words make disciples, doe signific no more then tell all Nations that I am sent of my Father to teach them, and they that will not hear shall dye the death. Christ without any more adoe doth give Precepts, and threaten death to all the world that refuse, and to make disciples is no more but tell them they are disciples, and under the Precepts of Christ; but if no acceptance be required of the disciple, the natural father or father of the Country, may covenant for their children as before.

Secondly, A Disciple may be understood in reference to the end, and that either actively for man that is active or diligent to get learning, he is said to be a Scholar; or passively a man is said to be a Disciple or Scholar that is learned; and this adversative vel adversus et distinguenda gradum est perfidie: if this man that is to be baptised must be taught adversus, it will serve turne to have learned one lesson in reference to that one lesson he is learned, though he hath learned but an A the fifth letter of his Alphabet. In the second lesson men are assigned a certaine measure of learning as sufficient for our calling, another measure for another calling; what degree of knowledge men must attain to before they be baptised, no man yet hath declared, and in so great a number of Scripture where an arrogiante inexorable; for want whereof, all that is said concerning a Disciple to bee made before baptised, is without any regularity or certainty; if it bee understood perfidie when a man must never be baptised, if not before he be made perfectly learned; whereby it appeareth that we cannot be said to be made learned in disposition to Baptisim, but as before made Scholars in relation to Christ our Master by Baptisim in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, being taught the precepts of Christ.

Mr. Tombes 127^d. falleth upon this as urged by some obscure person, but saith it is so foolish, that no man will say but he that is our of his wit, but he in the mean time answereth it not better than by saying if this were true, the Apostles needed to have done nothing else then to baptise them: I think if ever a man were out of his wit, it was here, Christ faith, make Disciples by baptising them and teaching them, if he meant so, need they only baptise them, and not teach them? or if they were made Scholars, must they not be taught when they are scholars? in what sense doth this man take Scholar? surely in such a sense that he need be taught no more: if he must be a Disciple in such a sense before he be baptised, it were a bold adventure for any Minister to baptise any man, or if he did, the party baptised must be taught no more: if baptising would make Disciples, the Apostles need doe no more, this were a good excuse for not preaching Priests. It is plaine Christ commands to baptise and teach; what if a man do per-some part of his duty, is he discharged of the other part? the command is in conseq[ue]nce neare both must be performed. But Mr. Tombes fall on that obser, rejected: but I further prove it.

What does not fling arme and helmyng, bring active participles, expresse the action of their verbs: and is not adversus the end, is not every action to the end? yes certainly, and to make Disciples is the end, inrolling them by Baptisim, and after teaching them the meanes. I desire that men may not be confus'd from principles and rules. But I hadden to try the strength of Mr. Tombes his argumen.

He confirmeth this practice, that Infants borne of Believers are univerſally to be baptised, for my part I hate not the question so, but Infants borne in a Nation that are the Disciples of Christ, or have received the Gofself, are to be baptised: of Believers much more, if preferr'd by them; and they undertake to instruct them by themselves or others in the precepts of Christ.

But let us see Mr. Tombes his sophismes, That which hath no testimonies of scripture that is doubtful.

Infants baptismne hath no testimony of Scripture, ergo dubitabil. The minor Mr. Tombes laboureth to prove by an induction, but it wanteth forme; he should have said, &c sic de ceteris, none of all these places might prove this, and yet it might have testimony from some other place: but I will follow him in his exceptions, and see how just they are against the testimonies produced.

The first testimony which he pretendeth accurately to examine, Gen. 17. 7 &c. I passe by his jingle, he raiseth 14 arguments raised out of several places of Scripture as urged in defence of Pedobaptisme, which he answereth, whose answerers I shall endeavour to examine, and see how the arguments are as he urgith them, or as they may be argued from this place of Genesis: to whom the Gofself Covenant agrees, to them the signe of the Gofself Covenant agrees; but to Infants of Believers the Gofself Covenant agrees, therefore the signe of the Gofself Covenant, and consequently Baptisim. That Mr. Tombes might prepare for an answer, he sheweth a great deale of his accurate skill, he examines four suppositio, things granted on the part of Pedobaptisme, and converteth them into questions, thathen them apart, and to endeavoure to take away the strength of the arguments.

1. Whether the Covenant made with Abraham, and the Gofself Covenant be the same? Mr. Tombes denieith with this difference, that the Covenant with Abraham was mixt, but (with respect to Mr. Tombes, his opinion of learning he hath gotten) he beginneth at the wrong end to prove it: for a Gofself Covenant between God and man, taketh in all the Covenants that now are, or ever were since

since the fall between God and man : God was never in covenant with any man or Nation, but in Christ Christ is the adequate subject of the Gospel : this Gospel was preached from heaven by the Angels, Luke 2:10. in 1392.1628. I preach the Gospel, which was in these words, Unto you is born this day in the City of David a Saviour which is Christ the Lord : Certainly whatsoever the Saints enjoy upon earth, or shall enjoy in heaven, they enjoy it in and for Christ. Whereas Mr. Tombes distinguishes the promises made to Abraham into Evangelicall, Domesticall and Civil promises ; what had Abraham some things in Christ and some things out of Christ? godlymice hath the promises of this life and that which is to come. Now to deny the promises of this life to belong to Abraham under Evangelicall promisorie to distinguish individuals by specifical difference, is strange Divinity and strange Logick ; is reason of different nature in Peter or Paul? or is Paul's reason of another nature than Peter's, because he useth fewe particular arguments that Peter doth not? Abraham had the blessings of his house, and others have the blessings of their families : and Gal. 3:9. Paul calleth us, that they which believe are blessed with faithfull Abraham, they are not blessed only as the seed of Abraham, but as Abraham they are fountaines of blessing to their seed through faith in Christ ; and that doth that inference clearly prove that Abraham was intituled to the blessing by his faith, enquon mœsi, as by the meane, and therefore is faithfull repeated in the argument with Abraham, that those that believe are blessed not with Abraham, but faithfull Abraham ; and further faith, not that the faithfull are blessed with the seed of Abraham, but with Abraham, they that believe have as full a right to the promise as Abraham himselfe : the same Covenant, the same blessing, remains to us with Abraham : as for those particular differences they are but ministeriall, and make no difference in the promise, no more then the difference of Peter and Paul doe in mankind : Abraham had his family blessings, we have ours : Loyca non traxit aut difficit particularia : if any shall say that his being father of Christ after the flesh putteth a mixture of the Covenant, and maketh it of another nature, I deny that it doth any more vary the nature of the Covenant, then a badge of honour doth the nature of man, and shall still appear in that so much of the covenant as was sealed to Abraham by circumcision commend down to us; and if Abraham had any blessing that came not to us, that was noised to him by circumcision, forasmuch as all the benefit that Abraham and his naturall or faithfull seed had of circumcision, that the Believer hath without circumcision. For though it be true that circumcision was given to all indefinitely, yet the benefit of circumcision came only to the faithfull both before and after Christ came : and this is so plainly set downe by Saint Paul, that nothing can be more plaine, that circumcision was of force to Abraham by faith, Rom. 9:10. Faith was reckoned to Abraham when he was uncircumcised, and that he received circumcision as a scale of the eightiescifne of faith : and in verse 12. he saith, that Abraham was father of circumcision to them that were uncircumcised ; where he implied that those that were uncircumcised were circumcised in a feste : and this is farther affirmed of them who are in Christ Jesus by faith, Col. 2:10. that they are circumcised with circumcision made without hands ; and this circumcision with hands is specified, Eph. 2:11. Ye were uncircumcised with circumcision in the flesh made with hands, implied that they were circumcised in the heart : what other feste can be rendered of this circumcision of heart, but that that cleanness of heart which was signified to our fathers by circumcision, remaineth to us though the feste be altered ? and this is that usuall setting downe of Evangelicall duties and benefits by ceremoniall exhortations: We under the Gospel are circumcised in heart without hands. Now how could that be, unless the intermall part of circumcision did relate unto us ? And this Mr. Tombes doth confess that the fulfilleance of the Covenant doth remaine ; but full helpeth himselfe with his mixt covenant, which I have formerly denied, and shall presently evince : the different manner of administration doth not alter the Covenant : God did fit forth, his promises of Heaven by Canaan: was p[er]f[ect] in the ceremonys; but the ceremonies did lead those that believed to better then the bare ceremony, without which, circumcision and all their service was utterly without use or benefit; God did in speciall manner blesse those outward dutis to his clo[thing], because they were his owne Ordinances, causing them to see more in those types, then they in their owne nature do seem to manifist. And thus Mr. Tombes confesseth, that the promises that were Evangelical in the more iuuent feste of the Holy Ghost, doe p[er]sist at the prouidence of Abraham soule in the outward face of the words: So that it may bee doubted whether this Covenant made with Abraham may be called simply Evangelicall ; and this doubt is made the more just, because Mr. Tombes, and feme of his company doe not call the Covenant on Mount Sinai simply Evangelicall; what have you distinguished between mixed and pure Gospell Covenants, on purposse to make the Covenant with Abraham mixt, and is it now doubtful ? and therefore doubtfull, because Master Tombes and others doe call the Covenant on Mount Sinai mixt : What if they misse it ? What ground then of the doubt? away with such groundlesse doubts : for wee call that Covenant, and all the Covenant that God made with man since the fall, purely Evangelicall, without any mixture at all ; and let Mr. Tombes, or any of his company prove the contrary : in the mean time, let me intreat Mr. Tombes, and all other that meddle with controversies, to make no more distinctions nor limitations, then lawes of division and limitation will allow: For, though at first they may win applause for their novelty, yet after ages will see their vanity, if any of them be taken up in a tract, yet times will come that will find them out: But all this while, Mr. Tombes doth not tell us what part of the covenant was sealed by circumcision, or whether circumcision did respect principally the domesical part or civil, or Evangelical part, or equally all; nor shew any reason why the Gospel covenant will not admit any such mixture as he supposed; but I do not love to infuse over a weak argument, or strike an adversary when he is dead.

Secondly, Mr. Tombes cometh to distinguish the feed of Abraham. I will not trouble my self to repeat or take notice of what Mr. Tombes saith well, but of such passages as he layeth down, upon which he purposeth to raise something against children baptism: He indowortheth to prove, that the feed of believing Gentiles, were not the feed of Abraham, the reason is, because Mr. Tombes doth not finde them so called: a man may not hear himself or his neighbour called a man in many years; nay, suppose they never were called, were they therefore no men? But it is plain, that the feed of believing Gentiles were the feed of Abraham; for that is the knot of the question, and God himself doth decide it. All that went by Gods appointment to be circumcised, were in some sense or other the feed of Abraham: or else where there had been no need at all of calling the faithful the feed of Abraham: But because they are partakers of the benefit of the promise, made to the feed of Abraham: And this is made plain in the doctrine of St. Paul, he handeth this promise to Abraham and his seed, not as the words do import, but as they carry the meaning of Abraham and his seed, not to circumcise or uncircumcise, the way that circumcision was annexed to the promise but for a time, was but accidentally to the promise, and might be taken away, the promise remaining: This the Apostle doth most artifically prove, according to rules of art: For, Rom. 4. 10. His purpose was to prove, that now they were not to retain circumcision, Christ being come, and baptism being set in the place and room of it, and that notwithstanding the promise made to Abraham did remain; now that he might prove that, he sheweth that circumcision was not a proper sufficient feed to Abraham and his seed flowing from the promise, as she came, and therefore may be separated from the promise; circumcision belonging rather to the ceremoniall administration then the essence of the promise; rather to the external part of the worship than the efficacy and virtue of the promise; and thus he proveth: Fifth, because the promise was of force to Abraham through faith, before circumcision, and therefore prior tempore, before, in time to circumcision, which it could not have been, if it had flowed from the promise as the cause: For, though the immediate cause be before its effect in nature, yet not in time; man is not ratiōnālis before rūbilitatis, and therefore as the promise was before circumcision, so it may continue after.

Obijd. But the promise was made to Abraham feed, which we are not. To this I answer, the promise was made to one seed, not many, which is Christ, as Calvin and Bucer explain it, not of the person of Christ, but believers in Christ;

implying,

bis scepticall Expositio.

implying, that though there were a distinction between Jews and Gentiles, yet by faith in Christ they were all one, and the argument in Gal. 3. 28, doth clearly shew this: neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, all one in Christ Jesus. Abraham had one blessed feed to whom the promise was made, which is Christ, faith the Test, verf. 16. But I have proved the promise was not made to Christ in person as the feed of Abraham; but the feed of Abraham is reckoned in Christ, and the word Christ is taken for the mystical body of Christ his Church of the elect, which in reference to the promise are but one feed, whether Jew or Gentile, so are the blessings and sufferings of one feed, whether Jew or Gentile, of Christ. So that this feed of Abraham in reference to the promise, was never understood of Abrahams feed, according to the flesh, but by faith: And here note, that this is not an univocal division, as if the members did not coincide, or, that some were the feed of Abraham according to the flesh, and none of them by faith, and others by faith his feed that were none of them his feed in the flesh; nay, but this distinction is in reference to the promise as differing from circumcision; all those were not of the feed according to promise, that were the feed of Abraham according to the flesh, neque of Iacob, but the believers, scilicet the feed of Abraham according to promise, Gal. 3. 29. If ye be Christ, then ye are Abrahams seed, and heirs according to promise, etc. not: And this is not to distinguish Jews from Gentiles, but believing Jews from infidels, and to draw the whole sense of the promise on Believers: so the promise is belonging to Abraham through faith, and the feed of Abraham, as the word feed is understood in the promise, and in the estimation of God is the Believer only: so that the feed of Abraham by faith, and the feed unto whom the promise of God to Abraham did belong are the same, the feed of Abraham and the Believer, whether Jew or Gentile, whether before or after Christ, are all one, in the estimation of God: So that the feed of Abraham that were blessed were believers only, not all the feed of Abraham, inquit not all the feed of Iacob, but in Iacob, that is, in Christ, that was the feed of Iacob, all that were in Iacob, that is in Christ, of whom Iacob was a type, that is, believers only, not all the feed of Iacob; for the promise did not belong to Iacob that was the feed of Iacob; for that, though he were the feed of Iacob, yet he was not in Iacob, that is, he was not infected into Iacob as a type of Christ by faith; and therefore the feed must be understood that the promise might belong to all the feed, Rom. 4. 16, not to that which is of the Law only, but that which is of the faith of Abraham; not to them only which were circumcised according to Law, but to believers, though not circumcised, (that is, after circumcision was taken away by appointment of God: For, though circumcision was not so naturall and officiall to the promise, that it was enough at any time to entitle any to the promise without faith; yet, virtute infinitiōis diuinae, was not to be emitted until God took it away;) for the promise was not to

Abraham through the Law therefore not through circumcision, which was a legal right, but through the righteouſneſſe of faith, verſe 13, to let us know that it was not any outward rite or sacrament that can entitle to the promise; it doth but externally ingnue the virtue of Chrifl's blood, and by it the circumcision of the heart, which in the flight of God is the only circumcision, Rom. 2. 29. He is a Jew which is one inwardly, and circumcision is of the heart, to the Spirit, not in the Letter, whose praiſe is not of men, but of God. All this while the Scripture treateth of the feed of Abraham in the circumſion of God's God, accoumte noſte the feed of Abraham but in Chrifl, none heirs of the promife but in Chrifl, none circumſciled but them that are in Chrifl, and therefore Korin. 2. 28. that is not circumſciled which is outward in the flesh, and this, ex regula de nullo. Again, ex regula de satis, all that are in Chrifl Jesus, that is believers, are the feed of Abraham, heirs of the promife, circumſciled in heart; but they have their circumſion and praiſe not of men, but of God, and they are equally denied and affirmed to Abraham's feed, Gentiles according as they are believers, or not believers, this without any reſpect at all to Abraham's feed according to the flesh; so that Abraham's feed had no right at all to any part of the promife in the circumſion of God, if they did not believe; and therefore, Rom. 9. 8. they that are the children of the flesh, that is, Abraham's heſt, are not the children of God, the children of the promife are accounted for the feed; and therefore, in Gen. 12. 3. the Lord did make the promife to Abraham and his feed only, but from Abraham he diſtributed the bleſſing upon all the families of the earth; all the families of the earth were bleſſed in Abraham: Or, as Gen. 22. 18. all nations are bleſſed in the feed of Abraham; and therefore do Interpreters interpret that former by [the] that is, in thy feed, and all that are in Chrifl, are plainly the heirs of the promife, and none but they. Abraham in honour and title, was called the fountain of the bleſſing, but in deed and truth, not Abraham, but Chrifl; for Abraham himself was bleſſed in Chrifl, not in himſelf, as Christ was: Chrifl was only bleſſed and inheriſed in and for his own holineſſe by the works of the Law inheriſed in himſelf; So that Mr. Tombes his diſſives of Abraham's feed are ^{not} by Chrifl, Chrifl's ſpiritual feed believers, natuſal feed is moſt inſcribable, many of this natuſal feed were ſpirituall alſo: Abraham's feed muſt be diſtributed into equivocall and univocall; equivocall feed Chrifl, for he was not like Abraham, he was of Abraham, but ex parte according to the flesh, Rom. 1. 3. He was Abraham's Lord, as well as his ſon; his Savior, as well as his feed: he vnaſed the promife feed, not the feed unto whom the promife did belong, as the feed of Abraham, but that feed that was the fountain of bleſſing to Abraham and all other his feed; and therefore Chrifl was the bleſſing it ſelf, the promife that was made to Abraham and his feed, was through the righteouſneſſe of faith, Rom. 4.13, but the bleſſing came not on Chrifl through the righteouſneſſe of faith, ſeeing the righteouſneſſe of faith is derivative from from Chrifl to Abraham: Chrifl's righteouſneſſe was primitive in himſelf, and that very righteouſneſſe that became Abraham's by faith: and therefore is Chrifl the inheritance of Abraham and all the faithfull feed, Eſay 43.6. he is called the Covenant of the people, and a light to the Gentiles.

Secondly, Abraham's univocall feed were like unto himſelf in relation to the promife; the ſealed feed in the promife, I will be thy God, and the God of thy feed, is only the faithfull, nothing belonging to the feed of Abraham's flesh, but ſo as they are faithfull, not excluding any Nation, or family, or perfon in the earth, ſo as faithfull: as for Abraham's feed according to the flesh, if not faithfull, non eſt neſſis inſtituti; it is not belonging to the doctrine of the Promife to confider of them at all, Rom. 2.29, they were not to be reckoned among the circumſciled by God. Now for the particular application of this promife to this Nation or that, in one age to the family of Abraham according to the flesh, in another age to the Gentiles; in one age under the ſeaſe of circumſion, in another of Baptiſme; ſometimes to give a Nation the means of Grace, Word, and Sacraſments, ſometimes to lead them away into captivity; theſe things were ordered according to the particular determination and purpoſe of God, though God did in a more peculiar manner blifle the feed of Abraham than other Nations, with the enjoyment of Word and Sacraſments, and other bleſſings, yet they had them together with the land of Canaan, and the place of Gods worship; only on conditions of faith and obedience, as in Deut. 8 and 29. chapters, and by the many threatenings of removal of them by the Prophets, and their actual capiſtivities may appear; to that theſe graces of faith and obedience come on this or that Nation, or perfon according to the purpoſe of Gods will, as likevile efficaciuſ operation of the Word, and the particular effect of the Sacraſment under the means of Word and Sacraſments, wholy depend on the mercy of God according to the election of grace. Men are to administer the outward rite and Sacraſment according to the ordination of God: God by his Spirit beſtoweth his grace, and with-holdeth it from whom he pleateth: The Jewes were tyed to the eight day to ſigne the flesh with circumſion; but it was God that circumſciled the heart, without which, the circumſion of the flesh was no circumſion in the circumſion of God; as Rom. 2.28. which man cannot not ought to take notice of, it is the way of God, no man knoweth it: it is God that giveth the new name that no man knoweth but he that hath it. Thoſe that have this inward grace of circumſion, are called and accounted by God for the feed of Abraham, but whom mafft Abraham for his part in reference to this promife, account for his feed? the covenant on Gods part is to be the God of Abraham and his feed, which God knows how to extend to Jew and Gentile, and limit to believers even amoung Abraham's family. But Abraham had laid on him that he ſhould circumſcile, but he cannot walke by Gods rules in the circumſion of his feed, Gen. 17.10. This is my covenant that keep between me and you, and thy feed after this, every manchilde among you shall be circumcised : the former part, I will be a God to thee and thy feed, might have served Abraham sum; if he had known how to estimate his feed, as God did by the believer, but that was past. Abraham still, therefore must Abraham have another rule fix him to voulc-by ; and left Abraham infusing on the word feed should debone many from circumcision of the flesh, whom God did intend to circumcise in heart ; he is charged with his duty in plaine termes, 12.12. verfe, Every manchilde in your generations, he that is borne in the house or bought with money of any stranger that is not of thy feed. And Exod. 12.48. When a stranger shall joyne with them, and will keep the Passeover at the Lord, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep the Passeover, for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof, one law shall be to him that is at home, and unto the stranger that joyneith among you : so yee see how Abraham was to come to his feed, not only those that were indeed his feed, but those that were of his family, nor to oþly, but the feed of believing Gentiles, were to be the accounted feed of the promise : one law must be to the stranger that joyneith, and to the natural feed of Abraham : the believing Gentile that would keep the Passeover, must be subject to the same law with Abraham : he must circumcise not only himself, but all his males, and the reason is, because no uncircumcised person may eat thereof : the matter of the family might not be accounted a circumcised person, unlesse all his males were circumcised, because that was the law of circumcision, that he that was circumcised himself, must circumcise all his males, because the blessing of Abraham was a family blessing, as Gen. 12.3. In these shall all the families of the earth be blessed ; and that which is there rendered by families, is in 18.18. rendered by Nations, All the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him : seeing all families, and all nations be of the same extre. Thus yee see plainly demonstrated that Abraham and believing Gentiles were to understand the feed of Abraham in reference to the promise of the feed of believing Gentiles, which Mr. Tombes doth not finde.

Yee see the promise made to Abraham and all families, and all nations performed in some families, even under the law of circumcision, the families of strangers, the males that were borne in the house or bought with money, were redelivered as Abraham's males ; but this stranger that would keep the Passeover, must circumcise his males not under the name of Abraham's males, not as borne in Abraham's house, nor bought with money, but under the name of the feed of such a stranger that would keep the Passeover ; they could have no right to circumcision, but as the feed of believing Gentiles. Again, yee see this promise is made to all Nations in Abraham, which must have a time of performance in that sense alfor but this was never performed in any national capacity before Christ's time ; yet God never maketh a promise ; but he taketh a time in some sense or other to perform form : but we see notwithstanding this promise, God had not any Nation blessed but the Jewes, and therefore doth St. Paul plainly interpret that part of the Scripture concerning Nations in reference to Nations after Christ, Gal. 3.8. the Scripture fore-telling that God would justify the heathen through faith preached before the Gospell to Abraham saying, In them shall all the nations of the earth be blessed : for God made his promise to Abraham, and all families, all nations, he began with Abraham and his, and some other few Gentiles families, and after refresheth the performance of the promise as it concerneth all Nations to the times wherein he foretelleth that the Nations would believe.

3. Question, whether there be the same reaon of Circumcisioñ and Baptisine in signifying the Gospell-covenant ? To this Mr. Tombes saith, that the substance of the Gospell-covenant was the same in all ages, yet this covenant hath had divers formes and fachions, where after abundance of words to prove diversity of formes and fachions, he endeavoureth to prove a diversity of the forme and fachion of the covenant with Abraham, and forme, fachion, and accomplishment of the new Evangelical covenant : and from thence he inferreth his conclusion in these words. Whence I gather that there is not the same reaon of circumcision and baptisine in signifying the Evangelical covenant : nor may there be an argument drawne from the administration of one, to the same manner of administration of the other. I have heard very much of Mr. Tombes his learning, and now I see wherein it lyeth, in drawing that out of premises that no man else can draw, and making syllogisms with two conclusions, sors et alijs, divers, and yet make them arise from the same premises : this is the learning to much magnified.

That which he principally gathereth is, that there is not the same reaon of circumcision and baptisine in sealing the Gospell-covenant. For my part I know but two ways of signations or sealings, one naturall, the other ex infinito diverso et levissimo. Now I conceive both circumcision and baptisine do signe or seal facramentaly, and by divine institution, and therefore there is the same reason of both their sealings. Now the different forme of the covenant maketh no difference in the seale : if it be an obligation for money, or a lease under large or ample covenants, or a conveyance of inheritance, wherein one parcell of land of an acre, or one free-hold, or more, one mannor, or more, maketh no difference in the seale or signaturie, neither doth it vary thereon of the seale, which are ex infinito diverso et levissimo : neither doth the difference of the covenant with Abraham, and the Evangelical covenant differing as Mr. Tombes would have, make any difference in the reason of the signing of the Gospell-covenant by circumcision and baptisine : for grant that circumcision did seal both Evangelical and Politicall, and baptisine only Evangelical covenants, yet they did both seal Evangelical promises, and for the same reaon, because God had appointed them to be seals : neither doth the mixture of one promise with another alter the operation operation of the seal, seeing the seal doth work as strongly upon every part of the covenant, or every promise in the covenant, as if there were but one promise in all, or as if every covenant or promise had a single deed and single seal : but all this while what Mr. Tombes hath here assigned as differences in forme and function, are differences in matter, not in forme or function : promises, the things granted in the covenant belong to the matter of the covenant, not to either forme or function : things promised, whether Evangelical or Politicall, past, present, or to come, belong only to the matter of the covenant, and do not vary the reason of their sealing, which maketh the collection of Mr. Tombes seem to me very strange ; and so much the more, because it hath the testimony among other things of a learned collection.

Bui, let I might be answered, that this was affirmed but barely, I shall desire that all learned men would consider what be formal differences of covenants, and what maketh the differences of functions.

The formal differences of a covenant may be considered, either differentia verborum, that is, when the same thing is granted in different forms of words : as when Christ is promised under the feed of the woman and the feed of Abraham. Secondly, covenants are said to differ formally ; if one covenant be absolute, the other conditional, one free, the other upon valuable consideration ; the one upon a condition already performed, the other upon a remaining condition of service or rent ; the one voluntary on both parties, the other voluntary on the one party only, and on the other imposed : Thereof, or such like, are formal differences in the nature of a covenant ; as for formality of words, difference in them will not make an absolute covenant conditional, or the like. And consider, I pray you, what formal difference is there in the covenant with Abraham, and the Evangelical covenant in Mr. Tombes his own sense ? was not the covenant with Abraham and the Evangelical promise upon the same condition in Christ through faith ? were not both in Christ upon the same absolute consideration in our selves equally free ? Do not we all stand bound to faith and obedience under both covenants, as you distinguish them ? Did not God equally impose on us all the means of our salvation ? Where then is the formal difference in these covenants you talk of ? unless you mean tertius formalibus, which make no difference in law or equity. Your difference you talk of, is in matter, which I have formerly proved to be but imaginary ; but grant there had been a formal difference in the covenant, what had that been to the difference of the seal that signeth only ex infinito, by the command of God, conditional, absolute, free, or imposed under covenant performed, or to be performed, all sealed with the same seal, unless the institution putt a difference.

But now let us consider what difference there is in the function : Sanctions are the ratifications and confirmations of a covenant, upon which the verity and bounds bounds of the covenant are established : are an oath ; secondly, a seal ; thirdly, a reward ; fourthly, punishment ; fifthly, earnest, and perhaps, some other that any memory and skill will not reach to, but for all these are the same to both covenants ; for the oath that he sware to Abraham, Gen. 22. v. 16. is performed in Christ, the fulness of the Evangelical promise in your seals : and Zacharias, Luke 1. 75, 77. doth challenge that function as belonging to him, and eddeth us plainly, that if Christ had not come to deliver us from the hands of our enemies, God had not performed his oath to Abraham. Now, if you look back to that oath, ye shall see that God promised in Abraham, to bless all the nations of the earth, which was not performed, nay, not to any one nation besides the Jews, nor is it much as by way of proffer, until Christ came under the notion of a nation ; but his worthiness was refrained to Jerusalem, according to the Jews, therefore Christ gave his first communion unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel, but after his communion was to all nations ; and then for Saint Paul, Rom. 2. 10. entitles the Jews to honour, glory, and peace first, and also to the Gentiles : And in Heb. 8. 1. saith comfort after Christ, from the oath made to Abraham, and from thence I gather (however it will sound in Mr. Tombes his ears) that the covenant made with Abraham did remain after Christ, or else the confirmation is but by way of analogy : For, what comfort can we have from the function, if the covenant be void, unless by way of analogy, with which kind of argument Mr. Tombes is much troubled, when he raiseth them against himself, though many of his own arguments be nothing but analogies ? Besides, our Saviour doth use the same function to the Gospel-covenant in Mr. Tombes his seals, even the covenant which he made with the believers in the new Testament, doth confirm by an oath, John 5. 24. Verily, he that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life : as likewise, John 6. 47. So that it is plain, this function of an oath was the same unto Abraham and under the Gospel.

Secondly, the function of the seal is both the same ; for the difference of the seal doth not make the difference in the function, for the confirmation is the same, whether the seal be a Lion or a Lamb. If a Prince should change his seal from his prey tryste to his arms, which he may do, if the Law forbid not, or by act of Parliament, if it do, yet the function would be the same : circumcision and baptism, though different seals, not different functions.

Thirdly, for the rewards, they are the same, hell and heaven are the same : for that temporal blessing and mixture of covenant, I have already spoken, to which I refer my Reader. But grant that there had been severall functions in reference to reward and punishment, what had that been to the difference of the reason, why circumcision and baptism should seal the Evangelical covenant, seeing they are both but one function, namely, seals ? but the change of the seal doth not change that function. That you see, how weakly this conclusion will follow from the premises, promises, and likewise, how false it is in itself; they are both false, and the reason of being such, is the same; namely, divine infatuation. But for the second conclusion he draweth out of the same premises, is, that baptism and circumcision are not to be administered after the same manner; did any man ever say that baptism and circumcision should be administered after the same manner, that were a strange and unseemly thing to imagine?

An Answer to Mr. Tombes

His third question, whether federates, and to be figured are convertible terms; and why may we be circumcised, to whom no promise in the covenant made with Abraham did belong: as Ishmael, the same may be said of Esaia. And why are these the only instances, I will grant Mr. Tombes more than he defineth, that half they that were circumcised, were such, unto whom no part of the covenant doth belong: was Abraham able to know that Ishmael was a reprobate, when he circumcised him? circumcision was administered by the appointment of God, and was not so intrinsically to the covenant, that it must be, Primum quare modus, propter terris mundi, omnes sedis non semper, will ferre: the time before Abraham, nor liable to any fault, it had been in use a foul before God gave it: and as for Job, Lot, and others as lived in, and after Abrahams time, and were accounted with this covenant with Abraham, they lost the benefit of the blessing if they refused to be circumcised, and what they did not is plain, the Scripture is silent.

After God had given the seal of circumcision, that were in Abrahams house, and all his servants, Gentiles and their seed ought to be circumcised: as Abrahams house, those that were not circumcised were to be cut off from among Gods people; those strangers were not to be accounted believers, nor fittered to eat the Passover; if they, and all their males were not circumcised, formerly proved out of Exod. 12. Then all that were in the covenant must be circumcised; as for the persons that were not eight days old, they were not to be circumcised actually, nor yet women, and yet were not uncircumcised: Primum non dicere de sapientibus habitis ante tempus batismi: si causas non dicere causa de novum adam, ne infans edentur; if he die before the eighth day, it is all ones, as if he were circumcised, being in disposition to circumcision: and the females, she was likewise circumcised as a member of Abrahams house, in that she was the seed of Abraham, partaker of the blessing of Abraham admitted to the sacrifices, offering of sacrifices, eating the Passover, though in her person she was not yet in her patient, in her husband, in her male issue the was, which privileges no woman that was not the seed of Abraham, or the seed of a circumcised person might enjoy. Now, sir, I may yet, how this woman came to help Mr. Tombes in his argument, that all that were in the covenant were not circumcised, the blessing to the whole blessed; but if one alledged person were to be figured, but were males must be circumcised, but what of that? not every member of the males, but their foreskins, yet every member of their bodies were partakers of the benefit, to were the females partakers of the blessing of the family, the first fruits, &c. of the whole lump; the redemption of the firstborn, Exod. 1:2, 13, did redeem the whole issue: why may not the circumcision of the male, serve for the female? that which committeth within our confederation is only this, whether any were refuted because unbelievers, not because women, or such as God exempted.

But Mr. Tombes for all his abandoning of arguments, from analogie bringeth an argument from the like, and perhaps a greater reason: children are baptiz'd in their parents. But perhaps not to greatest reason, perhaps no proportion; perhaps not infallibly, what when God shall except of the women to services, sacrifices, Passover include her in the blessing, nor young, nor old, never require circumcision of her, appoint the males, ordain it in such a manner, as without further explanation could not be exacted upon her: how can Mr. Tombes think of proportionable reason from hence? that may suffice with the baptizing infants in their parents which make afterwards be baptiz'd in their persons that are capable of Baptizing in their persons, by no colour of reason exempt: I pray Sir, let your next analogie have better proportion. Mr. Tombes procedeth, But it is manifest, saith he, that the Jews comprehended in the Covenant made with Abraham, and circumcised, were never, else not admitted to baptisme by John Baptist and Christes disciples, till they professed repentance and faith. Hence I gather that right to Evangelical promises may not be the adequate reason of circumcision; but Gods precept, gratis affirmit: he prooveth nothing, only he faith, that John Baptist did not baptize circumcised persons before they professed repentance and faith in Christ; notwithstanding Mr. Tombes hath not proved neither can he argue any of his opinion, ever prove, that John did require that they should profess repentance and faith before they were baptiz'd, it will not serve turned to prove that John required profession of repentance to prove he required repentance, penitence and profession of repentance by two things, neither will an historical narration, that this person did believe, prove he professed his faith. But we shall see this further, when we shall come to answer Mr. Tombes his other arguments. Hence that is from a thing not proved to a consequence that will not follow if granted; grant John Baptist would not baptize circumcised persons, till they professed they did believe that God did take away circumcision in Christ, and appointed baptism in the flesh, dolt it therefore follow that circumcision while it stood in force, was not dependent on the right to the Covenant, at the adequate reason why this or that person might be circumcised, I shall put Mr. Tombes in mind of this collection upon such an occasion as he will not desire to hear.

But let us see what associate cause he will affirme, to shew that right to Evangelical promises was not the adequate cause: Gods precept and mans right bee

associate

An Answer to Mr. Tombes

William Hussey, 1647

a Socite resone, causis subordinate in secundo casu, be not associate, much less any cause or reason immaterial flowing from the first cause is associate with any secundus causa, causa principaliter in secunde causa non associatur. Mans right is included in Gods precept, or otherwise there can be no adequate reason taken from a topic place which is hinc, nor any demonstrative medium to prove them not associates, because they are all joined with the operation of Gods, secunda causa non associatur nisi causa prima; an adequate reason doth not exclude the subordination of causes, but only parity of force; mans right to the Covenant doth not exclude the Covenant it selfe; God commands that all that have right to the Covenant, and more but they shall be circumcised, is not here right to the Covenant; in quo generis, the adequate reason when they and none but they might be circumcised the materials of Gods commands are Covenants and therefore in many places of Scripture are the commandments of God called Covenants. And Deut. 29. 1. These are the covenants which the Lord commanded Moses. From these grounds such as they are, Mr. Tombes denie the major if univerſally true, his meaning ought to be, if the proposition be univerſally according to the limitation of the termes in the proposition, the figure of the Godſell-Covenant univerſally agree to every person to whom the Covenant doth agree, & not every figure of the Godſell-covenant but some figure, it is sufficient that person figure in its univerſal nature be attributed enim tibi illa levitas, so as it is limited in the proposition. No man can deny this to be an univerſal proposition, though living creature must be in a limited figure, that every man is a living creature; though there be but some living creatures that be men, yet this is univerſally true, every man is a living creature; what could a man calle of convertibility, no such thing found in dicta serie, where are many univerſal propositions? If Mr. Tombes should deny it, he knew how easily it might be proved, and therefore all this suffice before which I have cleared, when this is proved, & you shall see what godly limitations follow, you ſhall fee full the proof of this, if denied.

Those relatives that are conſidered in the fame ſubject, they are both or none in the fame ſubject, but the Covenant and the ſeale of the Covenant are relatives conſidered in the fame ſubject, ergo the Covenant and the ſeale of the Covenant are both or none in the fame ſubject: or thus, That ſubject which is capable of two ſuch accidents as are always in the fame ſubject, that ſubject is capable of both or none, but that ſubject which is capable of the Covenant and the ſeale of the Covenant, is capable of two ſuch accidents as are always in the fame ſubject, ergo that ſubject as is capable of the Covenant and the ſeale of the Covenant, is capable of both or none. I have not concluded the major which Mr. Tombes hath denied if univerſally taken, becaue it is not a proposition; the termes are not in ratio, but in se of the exponens meurs wherof a logiſtique cannot be made to conclude, that.

that the conclusion; but from these conſidurations, or any one of them, an Entomme will rise, whose conſequence is int̄ denible. Thus the covenant and ſeale of the covenant are in the fame ſubject; therefore, to whom the Godſell-covenant agree, to them the figure of the Godſell-covenant agrees also, which is the very fame in termes which he calleth the Major. The argument is the Pedobaptis, but I conceive the form is Mr. Tombes his; but why ſhould this be particularly true, and univerſally held; I cannot understand why one ſhould be capable of the figure of the covenant, becaue he is capable of the covenant, and not another?

Now, for the manifeſtation of the proof, that they are always in the fame ſubject, the fame instrument: if a covenant be written in one parchment, a ſeal appendant upon another parchment will not ſeal that covenant, neither is that a covenant formally ratified without a ſeal: Again, the truth of a figure doth depend on the conneſſion with the thing signified; fo that if the bath hang at one bone, and the wine fold at another, that is no figure, becaue false, res veritas & humana, be convertible; & if it be any mans duty to ſet up, or any wayes give demonstrative figures they make fit when the thing signified is, as near as he can, or otherwife they be not figures; and this were a foolish thing in any mans apprehension, to say the land, and the doer for the land did belong to ſuch a man, but the ſeal of that doct did not belong to him, that was appendant on ſome other doct, and belonged to another perſon.

But let us fee upon what limitation he will grant the major, as he calleth it: he telleth it is true that of the covenant which agrees univerſally in reſpect of form and ſanction to them that receive the Goſpel, but it is not true of inchiſe as are of particular form and ſanction. This is ſtrange logicke, what can a Proposition be univerſally true in reſpect of ſome particular? Again, Mr. Tombes limiteth the wrong term, when ever man did deny a Proposition to be univerſally, by limitation of the predicate: the ſubject it ſelf doth limit the predicate: as if I ſhould deny this Proposition to be univerſal, every man is a living creature, with this limitation, that it is true of living creatures as are rational, but of lions and bears it is untrue, but go further into this limitation, I ſay, it is not true of circumcission, it is not affirmed of circumcission, it is affirmed only of the general nature of a figure, and conſequently becaue circumcision is not a figure of the covenant, it vies, and then it might be applied to them that were in the covenant, but not becaue.

A man take down an old figure, and patcht up a new,

the old is no more a figure, it is carried into ſome new place of the horſe, or perhaps horse, is perfect, but the place no ſervice of a figure, as for those ſuggeſting terms of form and ſanction, I referre my Reader to what hath been ſaid of them.

But the minor he denie univerſally taken, and here is all the knot of the quareſto, what labour is spent about the major's loſt; but that Mr. Tombes is not willing to grant any thing true that is alledged by Pedobaptis, all the children of belie-

An Answer to Mr. Tombes

William Hussey, 1647

Gentiles are not such as to whom the right of the covenant doth belong only such as were his spiritual feed ; the ground of this distinction is an opinion, that the covenant did belong to all that in any sense were the feed of Abraham, but the Gentiles cannot be accounted the feed of Abraham after the flesh, and therefore all the claim they have to the feed of Abraham is (as Mr. Tombes frameth the matter) according to the election of grace by faith ; and therefore Abraham might circumcise all his feed, because the promise did belong to his feed. Now the feed of Abraham is to be esteemed either by nature or by grace ; they that have any way had right to be Abrahams feed, have right to the promise, but the feed of believing Gentiles have no right at all, the believers themselves have a spiritual right. I have formerly shewed the falsehood of this distribution, and that the feed of believing Gentiles under the Law, were esteemed as Abrahams feed in right to circumcision : now he telleth us that they have right by election, but, saith he, which is unknown to us but by profision or revelation ? implying that those that baptize must know the election of them they do baptize, and that they can do by profision, these fancies I leave to their full occasion to be confuted. In the mean time, I briefly say, if no children were under the covenant of grace, we might baptize none, for as much as some are, we may, we must baptize all, seeing the disjunct knowledge of them that are, from them that are not, belongeth to God, and not to man : and this was the rule that Abraham walked by, and that we must all walk by, as stilly, I hope, appear.

But I come to the second argument. I argue the longer insisted upon the defence of this first, because I conceive in answering what he hath said against that I have unanswerable.

The second argument that Mr. Tombes urgeth, as from the Pedobaptists from testimony of Scripture, is from a Col. 2. 11. 12. The argument he raiseth thus :

To whom circumcision doth agree, to them baptism doth agree ; but to Infants circumcision doth agree, ergo, also baptism. The major proved.

If baptism succeed in the room of circumcision, then baptism belongeth to them that circumcision belonged, but the antecedent is true, ergo, the consequent. The major of the Prophyllogisme is apparently false, for to them that circumcision did belong, to them sacramental baptism doth belong, the contradictory is true, but his meaning is, that men of such condition, in respect of Infants, and he diemeth, am curseth, and divideth the major of the conditional Syllogisme into such parts, that he may find out something that he may deny : that it doth succeed baptism he cannot deny, nor readily finde out a reason why a man of years under the Gospel should not be able to bear as much as an Infant under the Law. I speak this in reference to the dispensation (under the Law) of the promises, the condition of the Church is called infancy, the heir under age : now, how should a childe of eight dayes old, when the whole Church is under age, be able to receive circumcision, and now the Church is at age, our Infants not able to receive baptism ?

He telleth us, that the argument supposed baptism to succeed circumcision : it doth not suppose it, but prowest it out of Col. 2. 11. 12. but he preparer for me to be circumcised ; that foolish persons to be baptised, that by Gods appointment were to be circumcised, should be persons of fickle quality ; but because he taketh no advantage of this difference, let him alone with his own expostion. In this foolish persons to be baptised, foolish persons were not circumcised, not believers out of Abrahams family, as for believers out of Abrahams family, if he understand it of such believers out of Abrahams family, as lived before Abrahams time, or before the Law of circumcision, such a plot, to prove all believers under the Law, were not circumcised, will vainly for to prove exemption from a positive Law, lay foundation for that lived before the Law was made were exempt, but for persons that were out of Abrahams family ; the promise was made to all families in Abraham, and they might be circumcised, though neither bought with money, nor born in Abrahams family, but devious to eat the Passover only, and so believers, they and all their males must be circumcised, but for the females, circumcision was given in terms, that did exempt females, baptisim, to all nations, no males only, as circumcision was, but females also. Besides, the Scripture doth tell us, that the Apostles did understand all nations, male and female, and accordingly did baptise, Act. 8. 13. Now, because God hath called in females, because they are capable of the figure of baptism, which in circumcision they were not, may you without warrant thrust all Infants ? or, doth it any way follow, because female persons of fickle quality are added, therefore those that were before capable are now incapable, if God had declared infants incapable, as he hath women capable, may he have been foolish ? baptism may succeed circumcision, though with such difference as God is pleased to make ; but because God maketh one difference in reference to the persons, man may not take liberty to make another : As for Job, Lot, and Melchizedec, or whom ever else you can name, we know, if they lived after the Law of circumcision was made, they might come, and be circumcised, the extent of the promise made to Abraham did reach to them ; and what those persons your name did, you cannot tell, if they had any particular exemption, that is nothing to the question, we know none had particular privilege to the ordinance but circumcised ; and in plain terms both in the old and new Testaments, no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof, Exod. 12. 48. and Rom. 3. 3. 2. this is reckoned the profit of circumcision, that they had the Oracles of God, there is every circumcised person for that it is properly assigned to circumcision, as the profit of circumcision, there it is uncircumcised person ; yet Mr. Tombes will tell us, all persons in covenant were not circumcised, this is the reverence that is given to the Scripture, when it crost in their opinions, though they would make the world believe believe that they were the only men that did respect the Scriptures; he should have made his personal difference by believers, and not believers: by Infants and men of years; and not by male and female, in or out of Abrahams house. Two sorts of infusoria (which he denieth) of baptism to circumcision, is of time; because baptism began before circumcision ended. What if circumcision did overtake a little, and baptism did begin a while before circumcision ended, the same Gospell Christ in his person, and by his Spirit in his Apostles, did put down one and set up another, that is all I say to that; and surely it is to frivolous, I needed not to have said so much.

In respect of signification, here Mr. Tombes is poor to his fluffe, ya fame significations he confesseth, but not in others. First, I will consider the significations he alloweth, that wherein they agree, cannot hinder their distinction, they both for effect be significative of faith, saith Mr. Tombes, but he meant mean it doth fundamentally confirm or tell, demonstratively signific, but how sover, he doth ague that baptism and circumcision have the same respect to the righteousness of faith, and yet the kingg of all Mr. Tombes work is on this, that Abrahams seed were circumcised, whether they believed or no, none must be baptiz'd but all shall believers, and yet circumcision and baptism have the same respect to faith. Me thinke the bare acknowledgement of this is enough to dash all that any Antipapist can say, the consequence is at an end, if there be no difference in respect of faith, why should faith be required more to the baptiz'd, then the circumciz'd? certainly, I would have found out some difference, or found some other reason why Infants should not be baptiz'd, than want of faith, or I would never have opened my mouth in such a case. I would never have confest them both seals of the righteousness of faith, and yet the whole weight of the baptistick depend on this; that one might be given in infancy to them that have not actually had the other may not be given in infancy; for no other reason, but because they want faith. What is the reason, why circumcision, the feal, may be given where there is no faith, but baptism may not; and that for no other reason, but because faith is wanting? What? may a man make a difference of a common accident? or make a generall form a specifical difference, or a specifical form a numerically difference? this is all ergo, if a man should say, that there were not a man he could, or not a Licer, because he can have; and yet after confessing, that horri men, and Beasts, can both hearts and fee; just so doth Mr. Tombes, baptistick doth exceed circumcision, because baptism must be given to believers only, yet confessing, that both baptism and circumcision have a like respect to faith; it is true, he afflymget other differences, but none of them will more distill from baptism, then from circumcision: The fifth difference is, that circumcision doth signifie Christ to come of Isaac according to the flesh, but baptism doth signifie incarnation, death and resurrection of Christs, his sceptical Exercitation.

Christis: doth this make the difference? can children better understand that Christ shall come of Isaac after the flesh, then that Christ is insearate, dead, and risen again? Secondly, can Infants better understand that the Hagarites were people, separated from all nations, then they can understand that all are one in Christ? can they better understand that the Law of Moses must be kept, then that it is void, or the promise of the Land of Canaan, then of eternall life? The difference that Mr. Tombes putteth between circumcision and baptism, cannot make Infants differ under the Law, and under the Gospell, and do they differ by that which doth agree to circumcision and baptism?

As for the place out of which this argument is drawn, Colof. 2. 11, 12. Mr. Tombes saith, that the Text doth not say we are circumcised, because we are baptiz'd, but we are compleat in him, because we are circumcised in him, and buried with him in baptism: I maist needs suspect this name learning, or his honestie, else he would never abuse his ignorant Reader thus: what, Mr. Tombes, doth the Text lay, ye are complete, because circumcized? Let men that can examine the Text feal, and they shall find, is & not our translators have dealt more faithfully with them then so, that have translated it, in whom also that is, we are not only compleat in him, but we are also circumcised with the circumcision of the heart: we have that mercy sealed unto us, though circumcision be taken away, and we might seem to be without that confirmation or ligges of the purity of heart, which our Fathers had. Why faith S. Paul Christ was circumcized, and that gave an efficacy to the circumcision of our Fathers circumcision ended in Christ, and is not defended to us, but the effect of circumcision is in the circumcision of Christ, part of the body was put off, in circumcision, but the body of fisi was signified; now this Christ did in circumcision, not only so, but by buriall he put off that body, that became in us, & of both which ye partakers, being buried with him in baptism: so that baptism doth entitle us to circumcision of the heart, by the circumcision and lassall of Christ, as the circumcision of the Jewes was made effectually by the circumcision of Christ; so we have the same grace exprest by circumcision of the heart, in baptism: it could not be plainer exprest, if it had been said, that the benefit of circumcision by Christ is made yours by baptism; Circumcision was the feal of circumcision of the heart to the Jewes: circumcision of the heart is fealed by baptism to you: For it faulth plainly, in whom also ye are circumcised with circumcision made without hands, in putting off the fles of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ, the means of all this conveyed into you by baptism; no man can deny that circumcision in the flesh, did signifie, and sacramentally feal the circumcision of the heart which the Apostle here affirmeth of Baptisme. After all this incongruous fluffe, Mr. Tombes denieth that baptism doth succeed circumcision, and therefore Infants are not as capable of baptism as of circumcision, he hath confessed that faith is as requisite for one as the other, other,

other, in regard they stand both in the same relation to faith, and thereby confess what he doth deny, and yet no more than the Scripture doth affirm.

Mr. Tombes falleth out with this argument; and in a metaphorical way talketh of an Egg, out of which, if not otherwise taken, nothing can be gathered: but that baptism and circumcision in some things signifie the same; and so do Noahs flood, and the red sea, yet do we not say that baptism succeede into their place, much lesse do we inferre any right to be imployed in their stead, reflecting the same perfors? I do professe I was troubled to parallel this noe-tenne with my thing that might equal it; if we could get these Anabaptists to speake senes, a man might the better deal with them. Can any man make any thing of this after Mr. Tombes hath allowed that they both signifie the righteousness of faith? that both signifie the sanctification of the heart; are they again turned into materias primas, that Noeis flood might be paralleled with baptism, as well as circumcision?

They will say we have of them argumentation; you might say baptism, and circumcision, frame things, do agree in prolatione verborum, and wauing unto some thing, as nothing, in action with whatsoever we can do. Your argument to Noahs Ark, is talata conformatio, a genere ad species a similitate; this Noahs Ark agrees with baptism in something, therefore in sacramental nature; as if a man should say, et animal, ergo equus, is a living creature, ergo, an horse.

The collection that nothing can be gathered in a strained sense, but that baptism in some things signifie the same; yes, more then that, they agree in some things, we may gather in what they agree, in the nature of a sacrament; in divine institution; in the feal of faith; they must be administered to all to whom the tender of grace is made, not only to all that are partakers of grace. The fifth, in respect of provision limited to a narrow compass, and by the ordinance bounded within the nation of Jews, thought not to the persons of the Jews: all nations might come in and be circumcised, and offer sacrifice, and eat the Paschal sacrifice. Yet this is not so where at Jerusalem; but now the ordinances are tendered to all nations, and baptism must be administered to all nations, notwithstanding of persons by the commissaries, farly the commission was not invented by man: Christ commandeth his Disciples to baptize all nations; here is not men, women, nor children, who must baptize some body; it must then be examined who they are that must be baptiz'd; it is wil-worship to baptize; it is no wil-worship to baptize all nations, to baptize whom we please, and rebuke others without ground out of Scripture, that is will-worship. Now, these persons must be found a subiecta capaci from the capacity of the subject; from the judgement of the persons as commisioned to baptize. Your part required, that you prove Infants are units subjects, and I will prove in due time, that Ministers are units judgements: For arguments drawn from analogies, I willingly granteo to be invalid, if you mind analogies of proportion; to invent any part of Gods worship by; as if we had bis sceptical Exercitation.

had invented baptism by rules of proportion, but being commanded to baptize all Nations, and that it should stand in the same field that circumcision, in reference to such principles as concern us most, and did equally concerne the Jewes in the same respects, and telling us of the particular privilege of the Jewes thond least, and the ordinances should freely be communicated to all Nations; never speake one word of the particular qualification of the person of them that are to be baptiz'd, he leavith that to be understood ex natura rei under the Gospele, God dealeth with the Church as fathers with their children; when they come of years tell them the ground and reason of things, leaving circumstances, which needfully will drive them upon into their own direction; whereas when theyare children the father directeth them to the sentive part not acquainting them with the reason, but supplyeth the defect of the infant with the particular direction of the fact to be done, leaving a care that he take not more upon him then he is able to bear; but when he becommeth a man of age he shoulld still continue in such simplicity as fulfil upon the same rule, and take no notice of any reasonable instruction, nor by comparing his strength with infancie judge nothing of his owne power, but he shoulld leave for the same direction as he had when he was a childe; when the father choocheth rather to infuse him by reason, then by sente, he could not escape the jea chire of a foole. God our Father relleth us that baptism doth sanctifie the heart, fealeth faith as circumcision did, Go baptize all Nations; this is enough for a man when he is told the nature of baptism by comparison with circumcision; and therewere the difference in este of women and apperception to the Jewes, to direct them by a rationall proportion with what God did direct his Church in infancie: ye shall circumcise no more, but ye shall baptize; that shoulld have the same operation upon the hearts, and you shall not refaine my worship to Jerusalem as of old, but go to all Nations: If any shall further object, But what say you to Infants? I say nothing, but that baptism in respect of my worshipp, and the operation it hath upon the heart, is the same with circumcision; and you know what direction I gave to my Church when shee was in infancie concerning circumcision; you are capable of as much purity of heart as they were then: that is all I say; you are now of years, whilist you were childe I taught your sente, how teach your understanding as for argument from analogy, though it doth come faire short of an argument from precept; yet it is equal with an argument from example; For indeed all that can be drawne from an example is by analogy, and among analogies those are more certaine that are drawn from a precept, then those that are drawn barely from an example, without any shadow of a precept, when the analogie is made by God, and we are led to the thing signified by Gods owne direction, and told that circumcision of the heart is the same under baptism, as under circumcision of the flesh: how dare we say that infancie maketh men incapable of circumcision of the heart? when

An Answer to Mr. Tombes

William Hussey, 1647

God sometime did declare, that shold hee obstatte to the administration of the signe, seeing we are troubled with administration of the signe not with the judgement of the heart; but as for that riddlement of analogies which he talketh out of Durands Irrationalia, they are things of no analogy with this. I further say, that it is not the proportion of the signe with the thing signified, that maketh a Sacrement but institution: I hope no man will affirm that baptisme wanteth institution: and as for the person, if you will have him adultus, I make no question you shall runne upon a greater necessity of will-worship then by administering of it to Infants, as I hope upon further occasion to make appear.

Your third argument is out of the verge of your owne method, as not being drawne from any place of Scripture, and therefore I omit that, and come to your fourth Argument from the Acts 2: 18, 19.

He frameth the Argument wellif the Proposition wanted not forme, it shold be to whom the promise belongeth to be baptiz'd; but Infants of believers are they to whom the promise belongeth, therefore Infants of believers are to be baptiz'd.

Mr. Tombes before he can make my answser to the argument, he must fit his answser that is he must infique and multiply two or three places of Scripture to the intent his Reader may conceive, that the promise that was there meant was not the promise made to Abraham, but the promise of lending Christ unto God; others say flesing the Holy Ghost; all is one; if Christ had not been lent, the Holy Ghost had not been sent, and the flesing Christ was the promise made to Abraham, as I have proved before out of Luke 1:73. But Mr. Tombes quothc some places of Scripturc, as it is man in them shold finde to plaine a difference from the promise made to Abraham, and there spoken of by St. Peter, as much needs give full satisfaction to all that doode of that: but let us view those places, Acts 3:25. Yee are the children of the Prophets and of the Covenant which God made with our Fathers, geying unto Abraham, And in thy flesh shall all the kindreds of the earth bee blestfed: that is plaine enough of the promise to Abraham, Act 1:8, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. And we deduce unto you glad ryding, how that the promise that was made to the Fathers, God had fullfilled the same unto us, Rom. 15: 8, 9. Now I say that Jesus Christ was the Minister of circumcision for the truth of God to confirme the promises made unto the Fathers: read and judge, and judge what Mr. Tombes hath gotten by these places to prove any difference from this promise here spoken of, and the promise made to Abraham: But saith Mr. Tombes, the promise was made to them he spake to and their childdren, so to them that are star off, whether they be Gentiles who are said to be star off, Eph. 2:17. or Jews in future ages, call of the Gentiles, or in he had, it is nee lively that he would have told the Jews of it; it might be, Peter did not at that time know the Nationall calling of the

Gentiles

Gentiles that was afterward made knowne to him; for then he could not properly have faild of them that were starre off in respect of the Jews, but Peter was not ignorant that as many of the Gentiles as the Lord shoud call had right to the premitie, and this was in no age offensive to the Jews: they always knew that one lawe was to the homebrede and the strangers that sojournd among them, Exod. 12:48, that is, when and after they were called: they were put into the same condition with the Jewes in reference to the premitie: it is plaine that the promise in reference to Baptisme is the same that it was in reference to circumcision: now it is true he further teacheth the inner power and effect of the Covenant which was the turning man away from their iniquty: this is the doctrine both of circumcision and Baptisme, that neither circumcision which is outward in the flesh, nor circumcision, Rom. 2:28, neither is that baptisme which is outward, but that is circumcision which toucheth the heart, whose prafe is not of men, but of God. Thus baptisme must be taught, it must be taught as from God, it must bee administered as by men; therefore saith Mr. Tombes, the promise is not made but on conditions of calling, and faith which may be confirmed abundantly, Rom. 4, 13, 14, 15, let the proofe be examined, St. Paul doth handle the promise made to Abraham in reference to the fruit and effect of it, and to entitle the Gentiles to the same fruit and fruite of the promise, forasmuch as the promise did alwayes bearre that fruit, and never any of Abrahams posterity had any benefit from the promise until they were believors, and that benefit the Gentiles always had if predictions, and now in a more free way: and this was ground to the Romans to lecke for justification by faith, because that was always the scope and meaning of the Covenant made with Abraham: but this was else true that the fleschly ought to make of the Covenant: Abraham was justified by faith as we are; Abraham was not justified by circumcision, nor we by baptisme: circumcision was administered in saint Ecclesie, according to the appointment of God, men had nothing to doe to examine faith, the prafe of dust was not of men, but of God: it is confirmed that Abraham did circumle without any judgement of faith, yet had as much need of faith for benefit by the Covenant as we, his justification and Observacion the same with ours by faith in Christ, Gal 3:9. They which he of faith are blotted with fleschly, Abraham: ye see Abraham himselfe had his blessing by faith, God preached the Gospele to Abraham, the seed of Abraham had the benefit of the covenant by faith: where it plainly appears that circumcision was not given by the estimation of faith, though it had a effect by faith: but every male of Abramah must be circumled, and that because of the premitie, the conditions of faith and repentence were noe newe conditions put on us, which Abraham and his posterity had not, though they are more plainlye preached to then to Abraham, God was the judge of faith in Abraham's time, and is so now, but the prouesse of the land of Canaan flesched upon conditions of obedience the effect of faith, notwithstanding circumcision: but, saith Mr. Tombes, the promise was not belonging to them simply as Jews, but as called; the promise did belong to all men quatenus called, but it belonged to Jews, though not quatenus is nam, yet it doth belong to Jews to be federatis, & natus; every Jew had an interest to the promise, though not quatenus, a Jew, because Gentiles also had this right, per accidentem, as called, but it was accidental to the Gentiles, some were called, and some were not; all Jews before Christ were called, but note, that called is to be distinguished into outward calling, and inward or effectual calling: by an outward calling, All the Jews were called: by an effectual, only the elect were called; w^th that Jew or Gentile, both these callings had their respects unto the promise, and the seal of the promise: The outward call had a right to the Oracles, Rom. 3. 1. the means of faith, and accordingly many had faith by that means, though some did not believe, that doth not make the faith of God none effect; the promise of God signified by the word faith, in that place, is effectual, though some do not believe, though it be without effect to them that believe not, yet it is effectual to them that believe; and though he doth not believe, yet the Holy Ghost maketh circumcision an inseparable accident to a Jew, shewing, that the advancement of the law, and the profit of circumcision were the same, and the chief priviledge is, that unto them were committed the Oracles of God. Now, this outward call had the promise of God being their God, and the God of their seed, and accordingly had the feal given to them and their seed: this is plain in case of the Jews, they had circumcision, and the Oracles and the promise, but all these are effectually, without faith, Heb. 4. 1, 2. Let us therefore fear, lest a promise bearing us of entering into his rest, any one of us come short of it: For unto us was the Gospel preached, as well as unto them, but the Word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it. You see, many have the promise, & let them that may come short of it, they may have the Word without profit, the promise of God, circumcision without effect, all for want of faith, all these external, have an external dependence one upon another: those that were born in a believing family, had an external promise left them, had circumcision, had the word, though they might come short of the effect of all for want of faith; yet the external administration must go by this outward rule; the promise in this place is understood in this sense of outward promise, that belongeth to you and your children, you are called already, and that is implied in the opposition to these words afar off, which are afar off, is opposed to them that are nigh. Now, they that are nigh need no calling, but they that are afar off, then we call; so that it is plain calling is in reference to them that are afar off; and then the sense of the words is as plain the promise belongeth to you and your children, therefore be baptised: and the promise likewise belongeth to them that are afar off, not yet called, as many of them as the Lord shall call: and this appears, in that the Apostle speaks speaks unto these Jews, & exhorts them to amend their lives, and be baptised, for the promise belongeth to them, & to that the Proposition is immediately true, they shall be baptised, because the promise did belong to them, calling of them that are afar off, is not at all immediately referred to baptising, but to the promise, and therefore cannot by any means be a limitation of such persons, unto whom the promise did belong, to make fit for baptising, as if there were some persons unto whom the promise did belong, that were not called, and some called; those that are called might be baptised, but unto whom the promise doth belong, and are not called, they may not be baptised; but this is to alter the form and sense of the Apostles words, though they might have a truth in them, yet they are not the words of the Text, nor significative what is there said: Amendment of life hath no relation to baptising, but to that in they flood guilty, and that they were convicted that they had crucified the Lord of glory: the immediate argument that he saith to perfwale them to baptisme, is, that the promise belongeth to them, it is no argument at all why they should be baptised, because the promise belonged to their children, nor because the promise belonged to them that are afar off, but because it belonged to them, that only was ground, why the Apostle should pray forwe to be baptised, what is further added, is to note the amplitude of the promise, to rouse up their faith, to lay hold on the promise of so bountiful a God, that extendeth his mercies so largely, not to them only, but to their children, nor stayeth his bounty longe, but ministereth it out also to them that are not called, to wif, & such of them as he shall call; you and your children, intra determinata, them that are afar off, extra indeterminata; but if all had been limited by as many as the Lord shall call, S. Peter had drawn an univerſal conclusion out of particular premises: For, if that part of the verfe alleged, out of which the Apostle doth inferre this conclusion or inference, be limited, then the proposition is particular, as thus: If the sense of the words be, the promise belongeth to as many of you as the Lord shall call, then it is no more but the promise belongeth to some of you, a few of you, therefore it happened, every one, had been a very irrational argument, to say, if you refrain promise to its strict sense, for promise with effect to the effectually called, then it can belong to a very few of them; therefore even one of you be baptised, were very litte: The promise therefore must be understood in such a tenfeas as it was when applied to Abrahams seed, according to the field, as the faith of God in his promise, is not of none effect, though God doth understand the promise must be understood by us, as left for all, though all attain not to it, and this not in reference to univerſal grace, but univerſal dispensation of means by us-men; and herein God did go before us by his owne direction in the infancy of his Church, leaving us to walk by the same rule; when we have a more ample dispensation of the means of grace committed to us, God did command all Abrahams seed to be circumcised, and all circumcised to eat the Passeover, though they were taught always they should not possesse the land of Canaan unless they obeyed the voice of the Lord, Deut. 28: and 39. Chapters : and all along, Moses and the Prophets preach the blessing to the be- liever, and though under the form of works, not the covenant of works ; it was faith that God looked, as in Hebs 12: all the works of the Patriachs are ascribed to faith and Abrahams obedience is commended by his faith; and he and they justified by faith, and not by works : faith grounded on the same truth of God, and the same Christ, God with the same liberty of his will, Rom. 9:15, in the dispensation of his grace, 13. An instance out of the old Testament in Elias and Jacob will serve as well as in Peter and Judas; the grace of God did no more nor less depend on Sacraments then now. God did not accorse any man circumcised but a believer, no more doth he now baptize; Moses and the Prophets did teach faith and obedience, so do the Apostles, and that notwithstanding the promise : yet the unbeliever and unmannur shall not enter into the land of Ca- ntain : this were the doctrine, thus the estimation of God in all ages, the dispensation of Word and Sacraments to the lewes, and them that were affir'd as many as the Lord shall call under the Law; but now to all Nations all are now called, God doth command all men every where to repent ; in the sense of these words all the world have an outward calling. Peter doth argue with the Jews to perweade them to Baptisme, a naturioris, they knew right well the bounds and extent of the promise; it was no new thing to them that the Gentiles called, shold be accounted among these to whom the promise did bo- longage that baptisme did legally wath away from, nor that sinners must repent, but that the promise shold be sealed by baptisme, that only was new : as for that Peter did reapeance with baptisme both together, as faith Mr. Tombes, that is not the question reapeance and faith ought to be taught at all times, as be- ing such things as God doth only look on most leniently at all times to all men, Luke 13:3. Except ye repen, ye shall all likewise perish : but out of this place it doth no way follow that reapeance must go before, or is required as a prepara- tion to baptisme, verie 28. is no answer to this question, what shall we do? we, that have crucified the Lord of glory? If this general question, what shall we do? Peter had failed to answ're them to repeat, he had been wanting to his duty, but preferre to argue from the promise to move them to baptisme, and baptise them prelmy will scarce stand with any Anthroposyfical discipline; you would hardly have any great company of Catechismen if you follow the example of the Apostle, which you to much stand upon, my the keeping men of years, many years under the discipline of Catechismen directly contrary to the Apostles ex- ample. But of preparation to baptisme we shall have further occasion to con- sider in other arguments. Mr. Tombes telleth us, that the promise doth not be- long to all Infants of believers, which is the minor universall taken: he hath for- mery merly told us of women, and believers before Abraham. I have formerly given satisfaction to chiose exceptions, but the promise is to be understood three ways, as before may appear: Either first, in creation of God, or, secoundly, in dispensation of the inward grace of the Sacraments, and effectually operation of the former, or, thirdly, in the outward dispensation of the means of grace: The two last, under the Law, to Abraham and his seed, and in Abrahams seed, which is Christ, to all the families of the earth: But now in a more explicit and plain way dispensation, and providence unto many nations in alia exercitio, actually many nations have the Word and Sacraments, and God grant more may have: But it seemeth, he granmeth the promise doth belong to some of the Infants of believers, but which they are, he cannot tell, and therefore will baptize none: The way of God was to Abraham, that because he could not distinguish, he should circumcisē all: God commandeth baptisme to be administered roall nations: it will not serve our turns in the day of the Lord, to say, we did not know who did believe, and who did not: it may, and will be unswerved again, who made thee a judge of faith? thou art a Master of baptisme, not a judge of faith, that is fuly denied thee: he that is a judge is a Lord over them whom they judge, which then art not: it were indeed great impety, to administer baptisme to any whereto we knew God had destined to everlasting damnation, but to take upon us to passe that sentence on any person, were molt high presumption, much more on any Infant: we have committion to baptize all nations, but without content we can- not baptize any nation, and this is a good excuse: he, fith the Text, fiesketh not of Infants, but children indefinitely: but it speakest of children in reference to the promise made to Abraham, which was extended not to Abrahams children only, but the Infants of believing Gentiles, as before: thus of the Argument from Ad 1.

As for the first argument, taken from 1 Cor. 7:14, that the Infants of a believer are holy, I have already proved: that Infants of a believer, though not of the seed of Abraham, are federally holy, and that the words of the promise made to Abraham doth appear: As for that the words in 1 Cor. 7:14. Else were your children unholy i' fay, it may well be an allusion to that federal holiness, as I conceive, though the argument be not so cleer, that among others more plain I shall infil up a year not to improbable, that much may not be said for the present thing I affirm, that the children of believing Gentiles are federally holy, for the argument, I neither assert it, nor disclaim it, but refer my Reader to that that hath been spoken of that matter, by other men, whose learning and judgements I honour, and come to the fith argument.

The sixt argument is taken from Mat. 19: 14. which is repeated in Mat. 19: 14. Luke:

such little children to come to me, for of such is the kingdom of God. The argument is, that these of whom the kingdom of heaven is, are to be baptized, but infants are such of whom the kingdom of heaven is; therefore Infants are to be baptized: For, that of coming to Christ, though the reason doth plainly conwince that in this place, more meant then a corporal coming, seeing many come to Christ corporally, of whom nothing is affirmed concerning the kingdom of God: as for his eight circumstances, he hath gathered nothing for, or against the argument: they serve for nothing but to make a noise of Mr. Tombes his learning, that he can obserue eight circumstances, of which he rejected divers as not pertaining to the argument: the other he maketh nothing of, but that Christ did not baptize these children, which no man that I know, ever affirmeid: but doth it follow, because they were not baptiz'd, therefore children may not be baptiz'd? After Christ had given direction to his Apos'tles and Ministers unto the end of the world to baptize all nations, and now rellish his Disciples that so much belongeth the kingdom of heaven: what kingdom of heaven in other places is understood of the late of the Church, after the publication of the Gospell, which began after that Christ rose from the dead, into which kingdom, John the Baptis't never entred. belong to such, you are not able to discern the difference, and therefore it cannot be laid to your charge that you did suffer any willfully to enter into the Kingdome of God; that the Kingdome of God did not belong unto. But the Apostles might have answered, my Sir, but we can discern these unfit for the Kingdome of heaven, they have not sound faith and repentance, and therefore we may not admit them into the Kingdome of heaven : to this our Saviour answere is plaine; the Kingdome of heaven doth belong to such as these, therefore suffer them to come to me : Now for the further manifesterion of the sense of these words, the Kingdome of God is understand, either of the Kingdome of grace or the Kingdome of glory belonging to the elect only, or of the Kingdome of the vible Church where men walk under the meanes of grace. 2. The coming into Christ my be understand of coming to Christ merita locali, or coming to him by faith as he liveth in his Kingdome of grace and glory : or last of all coming to him as he liveth in the Kingdome of the vible Church : Christ hath a residence in the Kingdome of glory and in the Kingdome of grace: Now no man can come to Christ as he liveth in the state of grace or glory, but by faith agreed on by all parties; but Christ likewise liveth in the Kingdome of his vible Church, and teacheth them as the Prophet promisid by Moses, and these inviteth all nations to the use of the meantes, and commandeth his Ministers to baptize all nations, and suffer little children, not those only that Christ blessed and gave especiall testimony unto; but those that were but like unto them in sensu, they must be permitted to come to Christ. Now the question is, whether this coming to Christ is understand only of corporall comming to Christ or any, or in which of those respects this coming to Christ is here understand; though I dare not deny a corporall comming to Christ is there intimated; yet this is not all that is meant in the direction, suffer little children to come to me; for the bare comming to Christs person could not have been intreated from this affectiōn, for to them belongeth the Kingdome of God. 3. In the Kingdome of the vible Church to dispense ordinances to all the world which I doe by my Ministers: A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up to you, like me, faith Moses, and him shall you hear : according to which promise, I always in the vible Church teaching the minde of God; as I thus fit ready to teach, suffer little children to come to me, for to fit behough the vible Church : if thus you understand the Kingdome of God, and the belonging of infants thereto, to figure their intent to the vible Church, then, come to me, signifieth no more in the direction then suffer them to be received into the vible Church, which is no more then suffer them to be baptiz'd, or hereafter when ye shall have commision to baptize all Nations; baptize them : Neither will Mr. Tombes his distinction serve tame, that those whole is the Kingdome of heaven may be baptiz'd, when it appears that the Kingdome of heaven belongeth to them, the text is not of these last fash, that is of such as have no difference from these as far as you can judge in reference to the Kingdome of God, theſe are to be permited to come to me. Now whereas Mr. Tombes fach fash, that is in meekness, that a liberty not to be allowed in interpreting of Scripture to affigne, or rather refraine the licensse to humilty, whereas our Saviour applich the licensse only in this, that they were little children, et non facilius quædam, but sapientib⁹ omnes qualitatib⁹, for a ſubject cannot be ſaid to be like another, if any notable diſparity can be found : it is true if a quality be affigned wherein they doe agree, that one quality is enough to make them alike though they differ in all other things, but for a man buredy to lay fach as he is fit for this or that employmēt, he that is fit muſt be ſuch with respect to his ſkill, fidelity, and all other conditions requisite for that employmēt. Now if any thing were named wherein they were like, it was in that they were little children, now ſtar which they were like for to the Kingdome of God : and if any children can be fit for the Kingdome of God, what uniuersitie can be found in one more then another by any mortall man? therefore Christ fath, Suffer all children to come to me, for they are all alike fit for the Kingdome of God, the vible Church and the invisible Church for ought I do know : neither doe I know that the uniuersitie of the Infants childre in the childe, but in the parent that will not bring it, nor covenant for it that it shall be a disciple of Christ, nor undertake to bring it up in the doctrine of the Gospell; nor is that man that is an Indifſerent humilty fide defensas to be believed in that point, if he will tell the intent of his child to a Christian, I doe not know but that Christian might bring this childe to be baptiz'd as his upon that promise, that he will bring him up in the feare of God; I am certayne, notwithstanding the promife was made to Abraham and his seed, yet hee that was bought with money might be circumcifed : all children therefore that are brought may be baptiz'd, as they be brought by perſons that have interell in them, and in any charitable conſideration may be credith that they will bring them up Christians : it is ſufficient for us if they be ſuch as unto whom the Kingdome of heaven doth belong, though the Kingdome of God belong not to them, neither can any way belong to this argument, that Christ doth teach men that are of years humilty from the emblem of a childe, yet one childe cannot be diſtinguished from another as more or leſſe fit to come to Christ by their humility: for that, Mr. Tombes faith Baptizē doth not bring to Christ : I lay, it doth as Christ firth in the vible Church, into which preſence the Ministers of the Gospell have communion from Christ to admit all Nations, baptize all Nations ; as for the Kingdome of grace or glory, Ministers certainly haue no power or authority to keepe any out of them, or hinder any from comming to Christ by

The seventh argument is from Acts 15:32,33. Acts 18:8. 1 Cor. 7:28.

If the Apostles baptizē whole households then Infants, &c. but Cor. 7:28.

An Answer to Mr. Tombes

William Hussey, 1647

This argument, saith Mr. Tombes, relis on a slight conjecture, that there were Infans in those houses, and that these Infans were baptized: but saith he, the words plainly prove under the name of the whole house, are understood those only that heard the Word and believed. Hence he denieth the consequence, implying that many whole houses may be baptized, yet no Infans, because it is possible they may be without children: And he further affirmeth, either these were without children, or else the children were not comprehended under the whole house, which he laboureth to prove out of the severall circumlocutions of the severall Texts which I shall endeavour to examine along with Mr. Tombes, not only as I mentioned them here in this pag. 20. of his Exercitation, but as in his Examination of Mr. Marthalls Sermon, from p. 137. to 142. Mr. Marthall saith, that the Gospel took place, as the old administration by taking in those families together. This Mr. Tombes strongly endeavours to controlo, and endeavours so far up an affirmation opposite to that for true: saith he, the administration is quite opposite to that of circumcision: the opposition which he saith, he figneth to consist in severall differences: First, that Abrahams family was fngled out: the males only: whether in the covenant of grace, or not; children, or servants; elder or younger: at eight dayes old in the house, by the Mather, or others in his head.

For his first difference, that Abrahams family only fngled out for circumcision, that is boldly affirmed; it is plain the meaning in the feod of Abraham was to all the families of the earth: Gen. 12. 3. which is rendered by nations, 18. 18. 22. 18. there premise is made in the feod of Abraham, which in the 3. of Galat. is applied to Christ: so that Abrahams family is not fngled out for the bleffing; it is true, Abrahams family is fngled out by the line of Christ, according to the flesh; many families could not have that privilege; but the privilege of circumcision was not refrained to Abrahams family, but extended to all the nations of the earth, and was actually afforded to so many families as would dwell among them or desired to eat the Paffover; as I have formerly proved it: it is plain as many as would be, or were partakers of the bleffing, must be circumcized: but the bleffing was promised in aliis figuris, to all the nations of the earth, though before Christ it was in aliis exercitis performed to no nation but the Jewes, yet many other families besides Abraham were circumcized; therefore that difference is not between baptifine and circumcision, that circumcision did belong to Abrahams family alone.

For his second difference, that males only were circumcized, I have already spoken to that: and the third, wherein all the latoe of the question doth confit, what is here affirmed by Mr. Tombes, is but petitis principiis: as circumcision was to be administered in all the families that would eat the Paffover, whether persons that were circumcized did belong to the covenant of grace, or not; so is baptifine, there being no man on earth, that can judge of any but himself, whether he belong to the covenant of grace or no: As for the circumcision of children, servants, elder, younger, I know not baptifine doth make any more difference then circumcision doth; for that in the hooft, and by the Mather of the family, or some in his feod; I say, that in Abrahams time, all the publicke offices of King and Priest, were in Abrahams person; Levi was in the lones of Abraham, what hard the Priest or the Judge had in the act of circumcision, the Scripture is silent: but certainly, whether it were to be administered privately or publickly, there must be a publicke account given of it, for as much as the person that was not circumcized must be cut off, which could not be done, but by a publicke act; neither do I know a more publicke dispensation under the Goffel should enforce a more particular administration: but the agreement in the last circumstance, is that wherein the argument doth rest; that is, that whole families were brought to baptifine under the Goffel: To which Mr. Tombes saith, that it was but contingent to families: that they were baptifined, no precept, nor prophetic for it: contingent it is, I confess, in respect of any cuts, that any nation, family, or person in the world should be baptifined, but these nations shoud be baptifined, is not without either precept or prophetic: the Apoflies are commanded to baptize all nations; the bleffing is promised to all nations in Abraham, and all nations are propheticd to flow to the mountain of Gods Church, Jef. 2. but we find not infants baptifined, nor families baptifined in conformy to circumcision: Mr. Tombes saith, that the conformy is not intimated: I say, that families were baptifined, the conformy ariseth out of this: But Mr. Tombes deſireth to clide this argument, by shewing that actual faith was first required in every person before he were baptifined; and therefore the Apoflies did not baptize any, but such as actually did believe, and make profiction of their faith: so that they did not baptize any family, unless upon particular cognizance of every particulae mans faith; this you shall see hardly he will prove: as for the examples from John, and before the commision, I know they walked by [scall] light, but what, we cannot tell, after they had their commision, certainly they walked by it: The fifth infante after the refection, is Act. 2. 41, they that gladly received the Word of God were baptifined, and why shoud they not? did ever any deny, that such as received the Word of God should be baptifined? and these are they, saith Mr. Tombes, to whom he faid ver. 39. the promise belongeth to you and to your children, added three thousand souls, yet never a child baptifined; men may as well fay, now a man, or never a woman: a word foals, an infant may be called a man, as well as men or women; but, saith Mr. Tombes, the Texi faith, shode that received the Word were baptifined; doth it fay, their children were not? but Mr. Tombes confiteth they were the same persons that gladly received the Word of God, unto whom Peter had said, the promise did belong to them and their children, that was the Word they gladly received: And saint Peter interreth from this, that the promise did belong to them, that they shoulde therefore be baptiz'd, because the promise did belong to them.

Now if this argument from the promise was good concerning them, why is it not as good for their children? and if they received the word of the promise gladly for themselves, it is likely if it had been denied them in respect of their children, they woud faine of them have had the boldnesse to have asked it for their children; and said, Peter, you told us of the promise, that it belonged to our children to as well as us; and you told us that that was a good reason why wee should be baptiz'd, and accordingly we are baptiz'd: why shoulde not this be a ground for our children to be baptiz'd also? we know no reason why that shoulde be a reason for us to be baptiz'd and not for them: You tell us the promise doth belong to them as well as tous; as for the limitation of as many as the Lord full call, that is to be referred to them that are affre off, not to us: affre off, as opposed to them that are neare, Ephesians 5.13. You that were affre off are made nigh by the blood of Christ: affre off, signifieth them that are not yet call'd nigh, them that are called: looke on the words in their originall sense; we do not use to call them that are nigh already, but them that are affre off, that they may come nigh: and this appeareth plainly to be the sense: by that here are severall subjects of the promise, you are the subjects of the promise, and your children and they that are affre off: You are not yet children, your children are not yet, you nor your children are not affre off, they that are affre off must be call'd, that they may be nigh, that to the promise my belong to you all, that to ye may all be baptiz'd. What Mr. Goodwins facias in, Mr. T. cloth not tell us, nor have I seen or heard, but cannot be denied that the word fooles doe comprehend men, women and children; for though there be fowle difference in their bodies, yet they agree all in this that they be fooles taken for persons; though for my part, I will not argue from hence, that children were baptiz'd, yet I lay from hence is clearly evinced, that children have a right and interest to baptiz'te, according to the promise, and that as clearly as any thing can be: for that which is a cause precenging an effect in one subject, will produce the same effect in another, postea causa ponitur si efficiens rationabile est viribus, is as true in children, as in men, he to whom the promise doth belong, may be baptiz'd, is as true in children as in men, if the promise doth belong to them both, as the text plainly faith at deth; and the pointing of the Grecian text plainly declareth that to be the meaning of the words:
for there is no point between you and your children, but between children and those that are affre off, they the promise belonged to them and that children in their present condition to them that are affre off after their call: where note that the promise is to bee understood in the external or internum confestation:
according to the external sacraments have their administration amongst men; which termes ye have applied to Jews and circumcision, Rom. 2.29. He is a Jew which

which is one inwardly, and circumcision is that of the heart in Spirit, and not the Letter, whose praise is not of men, but of God; the letter faith, God will be to the God of Abraham and his seed, but the spirit faith, that he will be to the elect and faithfull: The Letter faith, every male shall be circumcised, the Spirit faith, that circumcision is no circumcision which is outward, but that which liveth the heart: the Letter fooleth on the family of Abraham, either by generation or by communion; the Spirit on a remnant only, according to the election of grace;
the Letter requireth circumcision or cutteth off, some say [Goodwins antic-Ainsworth in locum] the parent, some say, the child for the neglect; thus external performance hath a praise or dispraise of men, but that of the Spirit hath praise not of men, but of God: To this latter, only faith and reparation is required, or rather both: circumcision of the heart, and baptism of the heart, is nothing else but faith and reparation which God can judge, and praise not man; and thus the promise, according to the Letter, did belong to those Jews, to whom Peter spake, even before their effectuall call; and this Peter urged to them as a motive to move them to be baptiz'd: as if he shoulde have said, upon this ground ye were circumcised, and now upon the same ground ye may be baptiz'd; it is true, we are not only Ministers of the Letter, but of the Spirit, and therefore we preach faith and reparation as requisite to your baptizme of the Spirit; but you must give account of that to God, and not to us, we can take no account of it, we are not Lords and Judges of your faith, we preach all the duties that belong to the inward man, but administer sacraments and guide our charity towards our brethren by outward rules, it must satisfie us: if you will come and claim your interest to the promise, both for your selves and your children, we must baptize you and your children; we will teach what account ye must make to God of your faith and reparation, how you must bring up your children in the fear of God, but we can take account of none of these things. The next place of Scripture which he taketh in to this confutation, is Acti 8.12, by which he prooveth that the Apoldies did not take in whole families at once, because the whole City of Samaria: we prove a personall account of all to be baptiz'd, was not required, because they were taken in by whole families in the Apoldies time, and Mr. Tombes confuteth this, by laying, they were taken in by whole cities; I like such confutations. Next, out of Acti 8.39, and 9.18. he prooveth that the Eunuch and Paul, singel persons were baptiz'd, brave arguments, therefore fam-iliars were not baptiz'd, the Apoldies had a commission to baptize all nations, and accordingly they performed their commission with all expedition, taking in families, cities, nations, singel persons, refusing none that would enter themselves in the School of Christ: Christ is not like a Grammar-school-master, that will receive no schollars, unless they be entred before; he teacheth from the text to the grave, from the A B C, to perfection; the next is of Cornelius, his houſhold was baptized, as may be gathered out of Acts 11.14. saith Mr. Tombes, though I conceive he mislareth the place : the baptism of Cornelius family is 10.4.8. But this household was not an ordinary household, but a garrison of Soldiers, what master is there in that; what did Peter cause them to be baptized, for scare, because they were Soldiers? God told Cornelius before Peter came, that he should tell them word by which he and all his household should be saved? Mr. Tombes inferreth that all Cornelius household were saved: good Charity, but bad Logick; that because there was virtue in the word to save him and all his household, therefore all his household were saved: in the 1 Cor. 1.16. Paul baptized the household of Stephanus, but saith Mr. Tombs in 1.6.15. the household of Stephanus is dedicated to the Ministry of the Saints; what is this to the purpose? did ever any man say that those that were baptized should never after be good for any thing? he fallethome of Crispus and others, that the household is understood for them that believe in the house; but comming to Lydia, he hath nothing to say from any circumstance of that text, to prove that any of Lydia house did believe but herself, but faith it must be interpreted by other places where they expressly baptizing whole households, they expressly believing and receiving the word by the whole household: strange that one history shall be expounded by another, because one household received the word and believed, therefore another household that was baptized, did likewise believe: an history can but inferre that some that did believe were baptized: but faith Mr. Tombes, the frequent use of the word household for growing men in the house, Mat. 10.13; if the house be worthy, certainly what portion may be aimed at, as for whose sake the house is said to be worthy of the Apostles abode in it is uncertaine, the house there is understood of all, little and great, your peace is no more, but your prayers: now fifth the worshippes may be found in the Master of the family alone, and the Apostles may pray for the whole family little and great.

But now Mr. Tombes will fall upon some argument, to prove that the Apostles did not take in families, for then falleth he, if it be true that the president bee an household, I demand whether we must baptize wife and servants because they professe the faith, or because they be of the household? If because of the household whether professing faith or not, then an unbelieving wife or servant shoulde be baptizate because they are of the household; if it be supposed that the husband or master being a believer, the wife or servant cannot be an unbeliever, the contrary faith he appeareth; and thus Mr. Tombs hath done his doo, and then cryeth absurd; but where lyeth the force of his inferreces, and the absurdity I cannot tell, Mr. Marshall and Mr. Blase lay, whole households were taken in; but it followes all households must come in, all of naturall that is inferred out of that, that the Goffell may be received by a family; and master of the family may render all his family to baptism, & the communione to baptize all the world, need enquire, no further into the profession of the family, but may take the testimony of the Master for the whole family for you change a term, and say if a wife or a servant, make not profession of faith (you minde to the Minister) then an unbeliever may be baptizate, & so he may, though they shoulde make profession of faith; but you throughout your whole Discourse, make faith and profession of faith all one, more Anabaptistes, for lay that infallible aside which you minde doe, and all Anabaptiste meetings are stope: for it is one thing to believe, & all another to make profession of faith: you much talke of that Countrey, and that household believeng; but shew me any but the Eanach that made any profession of faith before baptism, in which case Phillip did not teach him to confess his faith, but to believe only it cannot be denied, that the doctrine of faith ought to be taught to men of years, and that not as a preparation to baptizing only, but for that the doctrine of faith is necessary to all christians, whatsoever is the state of faith is none: that which we argue from receiving of families, and from the Apostles commitment to baptize Nations, is that Nations may make Lawes for their whole Nations to be baptizate; and if the major part of a Nation doe according to their duty receive baptism, and undertake for the whole Nation to subiect themselves to become schollers of Christ, they may justly compell by a penalty to joyn with them in the external worship of God, Deum &c &c adorandum, is the Law of Nations: all Nations have ever agreed to serve some God, without which no humane society can be preserved: all Societies are united by a Covenant confirmed by oath in the name of some God, and doe agree upon a common publicke worship of their God: but may not a Christian Nation give uppe the service of God in Christ? may they not enrolle themselves the Disciples of Christ, and returne to the publicke worship of God, which baptisme is the first? this therefore is it which is drawne from the commission directed to the Disciples for the baptizing of Nations, that Nations may act as Nations, as families as families: that is, that the most organical parts must act for the residue, the Magistrates for the Nation, the Master of the family for the family, otherwise it cannot be said to be the act of the Nation, or of the family, though a puffullation may be historically related to overpread a Nation that is done without any National consent to shew the univerialty of a spreading evil: yet where duty is charged upon a Nation, it cannot be orderly received without a National consent: and that of the Gauder household doth appear to be acted by his confess, as the text is plaine, Act. 16.3.2. Paul preached to all in the house, but in 3.2. it is said the Gauder was baptizate and all his: as if the text should have said, there were divers in the house that heard the word that the Gauder had nothing to do with, but thole that were his he would present to Paul to be baptizate. Now whereas in 34. verfe it is urged by Mr. Tombes that he rejoyned believing in God with all his house: I confesse Paffor and others render missus for yet it is an adverb of place, and can reasonably signifie no more but the place where they rejoiced; besides if messis shoud signify with all in the house, it must signify more then were baptized, because none were baptized but his, and if under the name of his, then he had an interest in preferring them. Now man can have no more interest in any than in his children, they are his in a more especial manner; so that if he had any children, it is apparent they were baptized, or else they were none of his, all his were baptized: And whereas Mr. Tombes saith, all the household believed, or all that were baptized believed; it is plaine that the Master of the house only is fad to believe, for the participle believerunt is referred to the nominative case, the adverb that is messis, though it should be translated with all his house, is to be referred to the verb, which is rejoicere rejoiced, they rejoiced to see their master or father so merry: if believing had been referred to all the house, it must have been omnes loci missis, et omnibus ordinibus with his servants believing, whereof it is said to be rendered, he being rejoiced with all his household; none is fad to believe but him selfe as in Lysias case, is likewise plaine: from whence it will appear that a believing master may present his servant and children to baptisme, though it doth not follow that a believing master may or will present those of his servants or children, that are adult or youths without their consent, yet he may by his authority require them to it as an exterrnall duty, he cannot compell them to any duty, or reframe them from any vice without their consent, yet he may correct them, and incline their will to any outward duty by his authority, and having wrought upon them consent and submit, the commandment may baptize them that come to presented: the master of a family is a King, a Prophet, and a Priest, if by any of these offices he can prevail with his household, he may bring them to the performance of their duties: Now baptisme as a duty and precept lyeth on the Minister antecedenter to the faith of the baptized; and is at least annexed to doctrine, and not to faith, they must teach and baptize all Nations: now it is plaine they must teach as well them that believe not as them that believe, againe baptizing is modus docendi, a manner of teaching, as I have said, and shall further be made appear upon occasion. Now whereas Mr. Tombes further saith, that then it will follow that the whole household must necessarily believe if the Master doth, and prowest that some time it failed on otherwaise: I say, that though it bee the master or husbands duty to move his family, yet he cannot alwaies prevale; and speiall direction concerning the wife is given to suffer her in regard of the bond of Matrimony and that under forme limited and restrained tems in hope of her conversion, yet nothing is said concerning servants but that he may either force them or be rid of them if they continue Infidels in that sense, that is refuse to lenthemselves among Disciples: the publike worship of some God being the bound of all humane society, 102.P. 6. He that walketh in a perfect way, he shall serve me, he that keepeth any servant that will not be baptized, is not a good Christian;

it is true, all men of discretion ought to consent to every duty; but baptisme is a duty without consent, as all other precepts are, it is potius imponsum, as before; and fo I come to follow his arguments, lipping up two or three of them, because he maketh flight of the arguments, we shall take occasion to shew the weakness of some of his answers, and where the arguments be weakly, the weakness is his, to bring them in.

The first argument of this sort, is taken from the generall premises to the godly and their feed, this hath already been handled how they conclude for baptisme as such, Exod. 20. 6. Psal. 115. 2. he saith they are for the most part concerning temporal things, then spiritual also, as confess'd, general and indefinite; if general and indefinite it must be so by reason of the necessity of the matter, otherwise indefiniteness would be particular; election doth not flop children, they are elect when children, or never; these promises are with condition of faith and repentance, therefore not belonging to this place, saith Mr. Tombes. Well, then was he too blame to bring it.

2. Ibid. 49. 22. it is foretold that Gentiles shoud bring their children in their arms, therefore the Prophets fore-saw the baptisme of Infants: It is the happiness of the best arguments to have the weakest anwers; they might be brought to other ends, which he prowest from Mat. 19. 15. but were those in that place brought to the Church according to the prophesie? then Christ must needs be understood as fitting in the Church, and suffer them to come to me, must be admitted into the Church, as I have said: it is true, that men which come to the Church, come for other ends then to be baptiz'd, but if baptisme be the door of the Church, as it is the sacramental door of the vifible Church, seminis contradicentes, beſides Independents, then whatsoever be their baptisme, they did come in by the door of baptisme: And whereas Mr. Tombes saith, that was an analogie and was performed by the perfusions in which the Gentiles did perfuse their chil-dren to embrace Christ: he formerly affirmeth little ones in arms are not to be baptiz'd, because non capable of instructions, and must bringing of little ones in arms be interpreted by infusions? it is true that Junius doth say, cum versis Evangelii quod est patetia Dei ad salutem, has omnia allegorice dicuntur de amplissimis regni Clericis spiritualibus; but he doth not say, that bringing of children in arms should be understood of grown children, capable of instruction, when it may be literally understood.

Lastly, I shall only mention that argument, taken out of Ephes. 5. 26. where it is said, Christ cleaued his Church with washing of water through the Word: from whence it is argued, that the Church is washed with water of baptisme, or not partaker of the washing by the blood of Christ: To which Mr. Tombes maketh this anwer: that if this argument be of force, the thief repenting on the croffe, Infans, catochumeni, martyrs, and others, dying without baptisme, are excluded out of the Church, and the benefit of Christ; he should have said, if none of these were capable of baptism, then were they excluded from the benefit of Christ's death, where God doth prevent any by death, the party so taken away by God, is not deprived of the benefit of Christ's death; God is not tied to sacraments so, as that he cannot live without them, though contempt of sacraments be sinful and damnable.

Mr. Tombes his second argument is, That which agreeth not with the Lord's institution of baptism, is defervely doubtful, but the right of Infants baptism agreeth not with the Lord's institution of baptism, Ergo.

I deny the minor, Mr. Tombes prooveth, because Infants cannot be Disciples of Christ; I say they may. Mr. Tombes confelleth Infants may be sanctified, but it cannot be made known to us, that is not Mr. Tombes his argument, that it must be known to us that they are sanctified, neither from the institution doth it appear that they must be Disciples before they are baptized, much leſe that it must appear: The communion to the Apostles, and from them to all the Ministers of the Word to the end of the world, is to make Disciples of all nations, baptizing and teaching them what Christ shall command. The parties to be baptized, are all nations, without any reſtriction at all; their communion is, to baptize all nations, and this in reference to that ratieonall covenant that was then among the Jews, only publick worship was limited to the Temple then, now to no place, make Disciples, is a limitation of persons: Their communion was to make all nations Disciples, which they were to execute, pro viribus, to the uttermost of their power; the conjunction of baptism, and teaching, with making Disciples, was not with respect to any perforial reſtriction, but it is consecutus medium ad factum, make all nations Disciples; the meaning is, by baptism and teaching: Now, the ſetting down of ſuch words, making Disciples; first is, becaue that was the end of their communion firſt, in intention, and might be propofed: as in all operations is neceſſary, as if a man will have an houſe builte, a ciy conqueſted, an enemy taken; the firſt thing that he propofeth is the thing that he will have done, and after direcione or conſultation about the meane, though they muſt uſe the meane before they get the end, I have already ſtolen to this, and ſhall more fully in my arguments that I intend for childrens baptism: For, that whiche Mr. Tombes ſaith, when the children of Infidels might be baptized, I have already ſpoken of, that it is not incapacity of the childe that diſſueth him from baptism, it is the fault of the parent that will not bring his childe, nor will undertake to bring up his childe in Christian doctrine; nor is he that is an Infidel, herein to be diſſeueth but in Christ, Jewes and Gentiles are all one, and a childe as capable of Christian Religion, (according to his education) though his father be an Heathen, as if a Christian; the reaſon why the feed of Abraham had a priviledge, was, the Ordinances were only in his houſe, as many as came to have been-neſt of the Ordinances, were circumcized, though not of Abrahams ſeed; they that were bought with money, or fojourned in Abrahams houſe, nay, though they were reekeons as a family diſtinct from Abrahams, and the males reekeoned not as Abrahams males, but their own males; yet, if they deſired to eate the Pascover, their males muſt be circumcized, Ezod. 12. 43. Thoſe that joyn themſelves to the Ordinances, and claim their interat in baptism, and relation in Christ, to be his Disciples, they muſt be baptized, and their families, and as many as they can undertake for, to bring to the outward meane, if they can undertake for whole nations, the commiſſioners may not refule them: they muſt be ſuffered to come, if any will undertake to bring them, though children. Now, that faſhion by undertaking to bring their childe to hearing and to learning, what is the way of God, do no more then their dutie, and what they can readily perfrom, and do bring their childe to Churche, and take order for their eatching, which (were the parents as carefull as they ought) were a great meane to promote Religion and Piety among men, and is often required in the Scripture from the father. That is by this Anabaptiftical tenet held only upon the Minister, which runneth into a great incumbrance, and neglect of the inſtruction of the people, whereby many have been encoſed to fall into that inexcusabile error that all men have the office of a Minister, if baptizeth themſelves, and have gifts, ſuch as the people ſhall appear of: But, grant that the nations muſt beade Disciples, before they be baptizeth, and that all nations muſt believe before Disciples? doth it follow, that every party muſt believe that is baptizeth, quod convenit parti, quod pars conversus tui gratia ipsius parti, that which agreeth to any part, agree to the whole, by reaſon of the part; but not to every part? the whole man feeth with his eye (I ſpeak de illa videntia) but not with any other member, but having gotten knowledge by the eye, the foul imphicit other members more impedita, to do their office: So the Magiftrates that are not only the fene, but the underſtanding of the nations believing, may be baptizeth, and by the duty of their place, require others to be baptizeth alſo: Non quicquid totius eisam paris est, in ratio integrantibus, a man muſt fee before he go into the river to be waffhed, he feeth with his eye, not with his foot; but when he is waffhed, his foot may be waffhed alſo: the nation believeth by the Magiftrate by whole authority the whole nation is pur to ſchool to Christ, and is baptizeth, which is an extreame diſtortion, and may be required by the Magiftrate: for faith, we have no Lords of faith, here every man muſt give an account of his faith to the Lord of faith, Jesus Christ, upon his day. In the mean time, it is a moſt infantile arrogancy, and contrary to Scripture, for any man to judge of anothers faith. Saint Paul faith, noe as having dominion over your faith, but as helpers of your joy: 2 Cor. 1. 24, and Saint Peter noe as Lords over the flock: if therefore they are not Lords, how come they to be Judges? what do Lordſhip conſiſt in a name, or in iudicare? names be but weak and childish apprehensions of things, natures only yeld distinct knowledge: Moses could no fower take upon him to judge of wrong done among brethren, but preferre they ask, Who made him a Prince, a Lord, a Judge, intimating that judgement belongeth to a Lord : Wee doe much declaine against Lordship and dominion over other mens confidences and faith, yet not only Ministers, but every man will take upon him to judge without scruple, this man hath faith, and the man hath none : it is true, charity doth peruse men privately to approve, but not condone the faith of another : Baptisme is an external duty, such as man can take notice of whether done or not : and if a man be called to an account whether he hath baptiz'd such a person or not, or whether he went or carried an infant to be baptiz'd, who baptiz'd him ? he may be able to prove these things by humane testimony, and therefore they are of humane cognizance : but who hath faith, and who not, no man breafing can give any testimony thereto, and therefore man cannot judge : But some man will say, the foot doth not fee, because not capable for want of organs, but every man is capable of faith, that is not the question, whether all are capable of faith, I mean of all conditions ; but whether faith be of humane cognizance, neither is that argument of any force that faith is necessary to make Baptisme of any efficacie, therefore until the Ministers are acquainted that the persons to be baptiz'd have faith, they may not baptize them by the same rule, because no humane action can be well done without faith, no humane action can be required of any man by the Civil Magistrate, & so at one blow al humane society is deftroyed, but man must require all dutys of men that they can judge of leaving the inner part of it to the judgement of God, who only can judge the heart: as for the neglect of a dutys fault, to no fin so great as to enter upon the Prerogatives of God, who only can judge the heart, to that whatsoever is pretended from any speech of believeng before Baptisme : yet no place where the profession of faith is required of the person to be baptiz'd.

The third argument is taken from the practice of the Apostles and John the Baptist, which faith he, are the best Expositors of the Institution, but I deny it, the exposition cannot goe before the text, John the Baptist that never lived to see the institution could not expand the word's he never heard of : but he affirmeth that baptisme cannot be administered to Infants after the same manner as the Apostles and John the Baptist did administer it, for confirmation wherof he affirmeth that the Jewes did confess their fines before Baptisme, and the Apostles before Baptisme, did require shewes of faith and repentence.

First, that they did confess faws before Baptisme, he prooveth out of Mat. 3.6. they were baptiz'd of John in Jordan confessing their sins : but doch this prove that every particular person did confess his fawes to John the Baptist, and that thin confessio[n] was before Baptisme, or that it was an orall confessio[n] ? none of all these things are necessarily drawne out of the words, the words are, Jerusalem and and all Judea, and the region round about Jordan were baptiz'd confessing their faines. Now I have formerly shewed that a Nation, or Country, or City may be faid to doe a thing, though the organicall parts principall men only doe it. Again, the text faileth, that they were baptiz'd confessing their faines, implying that the act of Baptisme was a confessio[n] of faine, as a man that washeth himselfe confesseth : (though he say nothing) that he was deffiled, but if an orall confessio[n] which the words do not w[e]ld, yet whether they made their confessio[n] before or after baptisme, is not said, nor can be proved out of the Text ; neither can a precepte be drawn from an historiall narration, that these men did confess their faine at that time, it is as much as it can prove, that it is lawfull for those that can confess their faine to doe it, but all that may be baptiz'd shall confess their faine, will no way follow. For the second place, Luke 3. 10. that is, some miskinde place.

He further affirmyth, that the Apostles did require before baptisme, shewes of faith, and repentence, and cirely many places out of the Acts, whereas not on place that he citeth to prove any such thing, that the Apostles did require any minime any shewe of his faith, or repentence before baptisme, if it is true, they teach men to believe and repente, but ne take any account, or require them, or any person to give any account to any Minister before they were baptiz'd, let that be proved, and the businesse is ended, to use his phrase ; but, to give a full answere to all that can be alledged of this point from Scripture, I say, that the Apostles did indeed preach faith, repentence, and baptisme altogether, but whatsover was said of faith and repentence, reference to baptisme, was either dogmatall, or historiall ; what was dogmatall, was without any imputation of accuse to be given, otherwise then to God : we can preach faith, and repentence, but no confession of manifester, otherwise then in the very act of baptisme it self, seeing it was impossibill for the Apostles to expound nations, and countries, and cities, if no credence had been given to the doctrine of baptisme, & that their declaration that they believed and were baptiz'd, might well be resisted by the Hilloian, though nothing were intended but that they were baptiz'd. For, when Hilloians relate any fact done, they take liberty to observe the necessary motives and circumsta[n]ces of the fact, without any other implication, then that the fact was done, nay, had not the Holy Ghost intended any believeng at all, but only said that they were baptiz'd, we might have inferred from the fact, without ratifieth, that if Peter, or Paul, or any of the Apostles did baptize, them that Judes, Jeromies, that is, the prevailing party did believ[e], that there was some kind of credit given to their doctrine, that they did believe there was some kind of good or benefit that was like to come of baptisme, or otherwise they would not have endued one or two men to have baptiz'd them, but that a profession of faith in a catechetical way, wherof the Apostles did, and of dury ought to take account, that is not said; I hope, to make appear on just occasion was done.

The fourth argument is taken from the next age immediately succeeding the Apostles; what is said concerning that point, is not argumentative, it depends only upon humane testimony, and men that give testimony thereto, are partially related where their testimony is agreed upon, that they did say so, as they are reported, yet their credit is questioned by him that disbelieveth their saying; sometimes that part of the world, out of which any thing is alledged, is proclaimed spurious, and that very author that we are content to alledge, with honour, when he speacheth for us, him we believeth and viliifie, when against us; so that what can be said of this kind, groweth rather of affection, ostentation of reading, then of argument, and yeeldeth matter of concertation, rather than satisfaction; and therefore I leave the Reader that desirereth to know more of this matter, to Dr. Holmes, and others, that may writefull with Mr. Tombes in this point, my resolution being, only to deal with him in such things as may carry theewes of argument out of Scripture, and so I come to the next argument.

The fifth argument is of the same nature with this, that the ages that did use baptism, took it upon wrong principles, as a tradition and imitation of Jewish circumcision, without universall practice mixed with other errors. Among Apostolical traditions, many were vainly reported and taken up to countenance several errors, as delivered from the Apostles; if some have disclaimed the proof of Scripture for childreens baptism, and held it notwithstanding lawfull from weaker grounds, that doth not any way weaken the authority of Scripture, and strength of reason taken from thence. If any one hath proved baptism lawfull from Apostolical tradition, that doth not hinder me, or any other from proving it lawfull by Scripture, neither doth the mixing it with errors in the same person, make the baptism of Infants erroneous; if so, all truths would quickly be turned into errors, seeing few men have been without their slips, which yet have not only told, but advanced and propagated without admittance many precious truths: Mr. Tombes would be loath, if his Antebaptisme be convicted erroneous, that all that he hath, or shall hereafter speak, should be therefore reputed erroneous: by the same reason, all the truths that were taught among Papists, are ex nomine erroneous, because they taught them; and to set only the doctrine of the Trinity, but the incarnation of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, were therefore erroneous, because those that held these things, held likewise many other heresies, and so his tenth argument is likewise unaverted.

His 6, 7, 8, and 9, arguments, are to never alike, and all to little purpose, that I bid thought wholly to have omitted them, but that men would have given some other confirmation then that they were weak, and therefore omitted, I shall therefore say something of them, left men willing to be deceived, should place strength, where indeed there is none.

He tellleth us in his fift argument, that Infants baptism hath caused many inventions to support it, and hath occasioned defect in Church policy, but prover none of that which he saith: he only affirmeth, that Infants baptism was invented by heretics and Episcopall confirmation; and that it brought in Church any dury, that doth not take away the goodnese or lawfulness of the duty it selfe.

His seventh argument accuseth baptism of Infants, with four errors: First, that baptisme conferreth grace by the work done: The second is regeneration: The third, Infants dying are saved by the faith done: The fourth, regenerate persons may fall from grace.

To these two arguments, I plainly say, that none of all these things are occasioned by Infants baptism, or if laymen may not doubt of the goodnese of all such things as wicked men may, or will take occasion to be offeraled at; for then Christ and the Gospell shoulde be principally questioned, the great blushing steme and rock of offence; to that occasion of offence is an argument, rather of goodnese then of fault, Satan being most ready to entice us to corrupt our best actions.

What doth baptizing Infants imply the conferring of grace by the work done? say we of Baptisme, as Saint Paul of circumcision, that is, not baptism that is outward in the ceremony, but that which is of the heart; but the proufe of that is not of man, but of God: we cannot praise men for baptisme of the heart, God baptizeth, feith, judgeth the heart, we baptize the body, but leave the residue to God only; in freedome of Christ, we teach thos children that by their parents are brought to be entold the disciples of Christ, the things that Christ hath commandied us, and tellleth baptizeth, when they come to be catechized, that they must have the effect of their baptism by faith in Christ, and not by the work done. What Mr. Tombes, are all Pseudoepiscopalls Papists? these are fringy calumnies, and why must Infants baptism necessarily imply, that the regenerate may fall away from grace? can none of your baptizeth persons that are baptizeth being of full years fall away from the effect and benefit of their baptism? if that be not an heretic, that such men as are judged believers by your Ministers, and so adjudged fit for baptism, and baptizeth, cannot ever after fall away from grace, I know not what I say. I hope Religion and knowledge of God, is not brought to that outward formality that all shoulde confesse in your humane judicature, it feines, Mr. Tombes, when he baptizeth any he will promisse the parties he baptizeth, that they shall never fall from grace. I have heard many ignorant people use this argument, but that Mr. Tombes, a man cried up for learning, should use such an argument, is admirable and strange to me; and certainly, by this Mr. Tombes doth plainly confesse himself guilty of that opinion, that baptism doth conferre grace by the work done: For he inferred, that if children may be baptizeth in Infancy, then men may fall away from grace, because many, notwithstanding their Baptizing become wicked afterward, doth not this imply, that if they were baptized, they were gracious? if baptism do not confer grace by the work done, how can it be inferred, that such men, as after baptism are wicked, do fall away from grace? Saint Paul, speaking of false teachers, 1 Thes. 2. 19, saith of them, they went from us, because they were not of us; not that they fell away from grace, but they defiled the profession, because they were not gracious: but, saith Mr. Tombes, if baptism be administered to infants, and they walk not according to the ir profession, they fall from grace, no such matter unlesse Mr. Tombes will say, baptism cannot be administered but to the gracious, they fall from baptism, and so will many that Mr. Tombes, or any the most discerning of them all, notwithstanding all the caution that can be taken, or else it were a most happy case to come under their hands which cannot be imagined, unlesse it flow from the operation of the work done, some of them that pass their examination will undoubtedly be unfaithful, or at least may be such, for ought they can do to prevent it; so that if they do deceivem them and obtain baptism, then baptism must confer the grace, or they may remain ungracious full, and so notwithstanding their baptizing, they cannot be said to fall away from grace which they never had, though they should renounce their baptism, unlesse by not walking answerable to the profession into which they are baptized, or not behaving themselves as Disciples ought to do.

The eighth Argument is taken from this, That baptizing of infants hath caused many faults and abuses in discipline, worship, and conversation; this is likewise fully laid upon us in the reknown tenth of these: Fifth, private baptism; Secondly, baptism by women; Thirdly, of surloin Infants; Fourthly, Baptizing Infants of uncertain progeny: Fifthly, they that are baptized in the name of the Lord, know not the Lord's Sixthly, it hath brought in the admission of ignorant and prophanes persons into the Church, and into the Lords Supper; for who can道理 rightly the rights of the Church to the baptized? Sevently, it preventeth the order of discipline; that first a man be baptized, and after among the catechized; Eightly, the sacrament of baptism is turned into a profane meeting to feast together; Ninthy, when once baptism; so that it hath the force of a carnal right, and not a spirituall infirmity: Tenthly, it taketh away at least dimisheth the zeal and industry of knowing the Gospel; But, are all these faults? and are all of these flowing from Infants baptism?

Fifth, I shall shew, that many of these have no affinity at all with Infants baptism. Fifth, private baptism hath nothing to do with Infants baptism; for the Infants may be baptized publicly; nay, Laws may be made, requiring their publicke baptism, though Infants; nay, the Directory is at this time opened, and in all times publicke baptism was principally aimed at and desired; and for the most part so performed; what he meaneth by private baptism, I do not know; baptism in an house among so many as make a congregation, I cannot discourse how that can well be accounted any such fault: I am sure he hath not writt.

2. He telleth us that baptizing of Infants hath brought in the baptizing by women, as though Ministers may not baptize children as well as women;

3. The baptizing of Infants hath brought in the baptizing of children not brought to light: for my part, I can lay nothing, but wonder at such an inference.

4. As for baptizing of children of uncertain progeny; I know nothing of it, but that if any man that is a Christian himself will undertake to bring him up a Disciple of Christ, such a child may be baptized.

5. They are baptized in the name of the Lord that know not the Lord: what inconveniences thereat? It is true, St. Paul saith, No man can call upon him of whom he hath not heard: It would indeed put on the feature of some probability (if it were referred unto the person that did call on the name of the Lord) that it were something absurd: but doth it follow, because no man can call on him of whom he hath not heard, therefore he cannot call on the name of God in the behalf of any but such as have heard of God? none can pray but those that have faith: but may not a fayrfull man pray for an Infidel? may not a Christian parent pray for his childe, because the childe doth not know the Lord? this were very fayning: as for the childe confess, I say so farre as concernes the Covenant between God and man which is sealed in Baptism, I confess not required on our part to the obligation: we are bound to obedience, and are under the function of condemnation if we confess not: and this is the very reason why circumcision which had as great a respect to the circumcision of the heart as baptism, was as vain, and nothing without faith as baptism was, yet stamped on the infants of the Jewes, why can the Scripture is not silent; therefore this argument is not of any force that baptism is not to be administered to Infants, because they doe not confess, neither the content of the party to be baptized were required to the obligation: if the childe were free from those duties unto which he is tyed by his baptism until he had confessed thereto, it were a great wrong to baptize him and thereby lay a yoke upon him without his confess, from which he were otherwise free; but whether he confess or not, the obligation of obedience and faith lyeth on him, and the function of wrath and condemnation attendeth on the Infidel and disobedient whether they confess or not, whether they are baptized or not; so that the content both to obedience, and Faith, and baptism; whether baptism be represented to them as already done, or to be done, is reckoned of him that is about or of years, as a duty, not as liberty; the refusing to content is a curse and punishable both by God and man, though these content much in intervals, of which only God can judge and punish i faith and obedience of the heart; but as for the exterrnall rite of baptismal that is to be performed in the sight of men, and men may require him that is of years to consent to his baptism, laying the neglect on him as a fraine, and punishing him for it as for adultery, fornication, or any other publicke offence, leaving the matter of faith which is private, to the judgement of God: to like wife may the Nations receive baptismal for the whole, as all other exterrnall, requiring parents to bring their children as before: I have thought good to speake something to this point, becauſe it feareth to carry ſome thew of reaſon with it, that no man ſhould be tyed to a Covenant unto which he never gave any conuent, which in free covenants is true, though in publike covenants we are tyed by the covenants of our Anceſtors, and are bound by thofe lawes we are borne under, made by the conuent of our parents; but in the cafe betweene God and us, he made us, and giveth lawes to us, under which we muſt live or dy: (Take Lawes here in a general ſenſe to ſignifie direction for faith and repenteance, as well as any other ruleſ of life) not by vertue of our owne conuent, but Gods abſolute right and authority.

6. Mr. Tombe telleth us, that baptizing of infants bath brought the admittion of ignorant and prophanē perfons unto the communion of the Church, and to the Lords Supper: for who can deny rigthly the rite of the Church to the baptized? fo he.

To this I anſwer, that the engagement of the parent, to infirmit his childe (which is bur his duty) will certainly be a great meaneſ to fit men upon the perſormance of their duty therin, when men shall ſolemny in the preſence of God before a congregatiōne be charged with the bringing up of their children in the fear of God, that they mift looke to their oowne conueration that it be exemplar to their children, if this be not performed by the parents, yet the charging it upon them out of Gods wonē, cannot be a treaſure rather to keep out ignorance and prophanētice, then to bring them in: can any meaneſ beaſed by man more avable then to infirmit children in their tender years in the knowledge of God? Certainly God hath informed us, that this is the moſt lifing knowledge that weſ learned in tender years, and our expeſence doth abundantly conuine this. Now what greater care can bee had by the Church then in ſuch a ſolemne and faciemcul ſtanner for a man to be charged with the education of his childe as a Scholler of Christ, as foſon as he is able to learme any thing? if this be a way to introduce prophanētice and ignorance, I know not what can keepe it out; but he impleyeth a great ſinne, that ignorant perfons ſhould be admitted into communion of the Church, and the Lords Supper; for this admittance into the communion of the Church, if any thing may be argued from thence touching the unlawfullenesſ of Infants baptizing, a juſt and due tract ought to be infirmit, wherein the whole quæſion muſt be ſtated; what is meant by communion of the Church, whether he understand the viſible or invisible Church, whose office it is to admit, and whole to flout out of the Churches communion, what be the riſes of a viſible and what of an invisible Church? how can the Inſtant come and demand the Lords Supper, which he diſtinguiſheth from the communion of the Church (but how I canſerell!) until they be infirmit to know the Lords body to remember the death of Christ, and examine themſelves, which they are commanded to doe, and then eat? but where is the Minifter commanded to give the Sacrament to all that are in the Churche, or to tame them out of the Churche? theſe things muſt be proved plainly, or elſe otherwife the argument drawne from hence againſt childrens baptizing is abſurditorius: Christ giveth you a change to baptize all Nations: you ſay may: we ſhall then let in ignorant and prophanē perfors into the Churche, you will not baptize any until they be fit to receive the Sacrament: you were as good ſay, you wil make conuenions your ſelves: Christ bids baptize and teach: you ſay ſo: in more in the manner then you will baptize when you pleafe, and whom you pleafe, they that will be baptiz'd muſt paſſe your conuincion, and flay your leſons.

Christ huds you teach, and fo much examination as is needfull for teaching may be deduced from thence: but did God give you in charge to admitt and refule, and give you any rules by which ye might walke in the diſcharge of this duty? if yo ye might then juffly plead this right, and make that an argumēnt to remove all that standeth in its way. But I wonder extremely in the intemperate ſciale of that thate that the plaid of admittint and refuling of men ex officio from and to Baptizing, and the Lords Supper; and herein the Lords Supper is the moſt cryed up privilege which you here ſhall ſuppon (whether out of your oowne opinion as it ſeems by forme is ſuſpected, or to conuine your adverſaries) and make this as a medium to prove that Infants may not be baptiz'd, because none may be admittet to the Lords Supper that are wicked: though my part I doth not unſteind the conquence how baptizing infants and chargint their parents to bring them up in the fear of God woul'd be a meane to cherifh and feter up ignorance and fin. But here men cry out againſt liberty to come to the Lords Supper, as if that would pollute the Sacrament, and contaminate ſame: as though men might not have liberty to come to the Lords Supper upon their own examination, and yet might juffly be purifiid for their ſins when they can be proved againſt them: may not men make choice of their oowne halidomnes and drinke when they pleafe, and yet be juffly purifiid for adulterie and drunkeneſſe? Do not know but the Magistrate may ſuppreſſe and paſhifh, though men may be allowed their liberty to receive Sacraments: For my part, I wiſe none ſtricke coulfe were taken with fin.

The seventh fault laid to the charge of Infants baptizing, is that, it perverts the oder of discipline, that firſt a man be baptiz'd, and after among the catechized; but who I pray you, Mr. Tombe did lay downe this for an oder of Discipline? it

William Hussey, 1647

Sacraments are subservient principally to Discipline: I had thought the use of Sacraments had been for confirmation of doctrine.

But let us once hear where this discipline is, what footsteps in the doctrine or practice of Christ and his Apostles: As for the practice of the Apostles, there is nothing found but conversion, and baptizing, without any intermission of time: that of Math. 3, 5, 6, there Jerusalem, Judes, and all the region round about Jordan, came to John the Baptist, and were baptized of him; as like Act. 2, no catechizing either of these persons: if ever they meant to know Christ, must be educated after their baptism, or not at all: I understand not any such duty of catechizing, if not comprehended in the duty of teaching; and doth this seem a thing so strange to you, that men should be taught after they are baptized? What? may not men be taught after they have bargained to be disciplines? This is all one, as if a man should bargain with a School-master, that his son should be his scholar, and from that day forward, the School-master should never teach him; but this rather dependeth upon the use of the Ancients, then authority of the Word.

The three last confute themselves; as for recompensation, I fee the Anabaptists so fondly paid with abuses and faults, that have been laid to their charge by others, that I shall not meddle with them in this point, neque per te, absque per accidentem.

The ninth Reason, that which catcht unnecessary disputes, that cannot be determined by any certain rule, that is, deservingly doubtful: but the tenet of Infants baptism is such. All these disputes are determined by a certain rule; when the communion plainly charged the Ministers to baptize all the world, so as they can make them disciples, if any will undertake to bring them up in the fear of God, and introduction of the Gospel: or they of yours do undertake for themselves submision to the Gospel, they may be baptized; this is the rule of the Word: Abraham had not only right to circumcise his own children, but he might buy a childe and circumcise it; if my, if he bought it, he must circumcise it.

Bur grant that they must be taught first, tell me how will Mr. Tombes satisfie the doubts that may arise from hence? how much they must learn first, how long they must be catechized? secondly, who maile judge of their sufficiency? thirdly, what if any shoud baptize them before they were fit? whether that must be accounted a void act, and the party put again among the catechized? fourthly, whether, if this accounted valid, whether the party that was baptized before he were sufficiently catechized, must ever after remain ignorant? together with many other of the like nature, which I shall put among my reasons for childrens baptism.

The tenth Reason is the same with the first, only there he handles accidentes fidei, subiecta, herecias, herefesies; there the faith, it was mixed with other errors: here, that those that held Infants baptism, held other errors; therefore I conceive that already answered.

his scepticall Exercitation.

The eleventh, Pedobaptists agree not among themselves, when Anabaptists do, this may be an Argument, not till then; and yet answeraable, that men may agree in civil and godly, as arising from a more common principle.

And now I am at last come to his last Reason, and that a weighty one, saith Mr. Tombes: But it is taken only from a seeming effect of Infants baptism; if there be any weight in an Argument from an effect, that is, ab effectu pro causa, operi; but this doth but seem to take away our end, and, perhaps, the primary end of baptism; that it shoud be a signe the baptized shewth himself a disciple, and confesseth the faith. Mr. Tombes relleth us, that many things argue, that it shoud be such a signe; but keepeth his arguments to himself; for my part, I know none, I know nothing charged upon the party to be baptized, as a preparacion to his baptism: as for profission of faith, that is also where required, I assure Philip did reach the Eunuchs baptism, and faith, but profission of faith he taught them not: It is likewise true that St. Luke doth historically relate, that the Eunuch did confess his faith, but of this before.

But Mr. Tombes doth prove that men must confess their faith before baptism, because baptism is a signe that the baptized shewth himself a disciple, and confesseth himself a disciple. To this, I first say, that baptism may be a signe of profission, but not a sacramental signe: A sacramental signe is to signific what Christ hat set it to signific, namely, food and nourishment; this is the end of a sacrament, to lead our ministrants to the apprehension of the other things of God; to comprehend the vertue and efficacy of the body and blood of Christ, the participation of the fullness of Christ, to lead our faith by the authority of God, to the apprehension of the things of God. It is true, our duty is annexed to receiving of sacraments, whereto we are bound by vertue of the command of Christ; but the signification of the sacrament is not in our duty, but in Gods mercy; were not our duty conseruant about an incomprehensible object, we should have had no need of sacraments: But, for Mr. Tombes to say sacraments to be vifible signes of grace, without giving any reason for it, when St. Luke doth plainly tell us, that baptism doth wash away sin, Act. 22, 16, and be baptized, and wash away thy sin: and St. Paul doth tell us plainly, that the bread which we break, is the communion of the body of Christ, shewing that it is a distribution of the body of Christ: communication is properly, in partem et in interiorum; I remember I have read in Arift. Topic. lib. 4, cap. 1. Partic. 6. Kedr. lib. 1. 72, that participare est subscire quod communicare definitionem; and Keckerman in the quoted place saith, efficiens individua, multa communio; ut ignis calorique where you see, that communication is still rendered by giving the whole nature and definitions in universali, or in exciting qualitatem simillarem, a like quality in another body; whereby it must appear, that Christ in the sacrament, doth communicate or distribute some grace among us: as for our duties, that by virtue verte of the command are annexed to the receiving of the sacrament, those are extensiall to the nature of the sacrament, though necessary to the efficacy thereof unto us : This mift needs be a declining caute, that enforceth the foregoft patron of it in its defence, to deny the nature of a sacrament.

But fay further : Mr. Tombes fath, that baptism is a figure of profeflion. Profeflion is taken popularly and materially for the Art or Trade that is profefled, and then men may be faid to wear fome badge or figne of their profeflion ; otherwife , in a proper and strict feme, Profeflion is nothing elfe , but a figne or femeching in the heart or minde of him that doth profeflion ; fo that profeflion of our faith is but a figne of our faith , and a figne of that profeflion is but a figne of a figne ; nay, profeflion itfelf is more manifeft than any sacrament can be, and therefore needeth no figne ; but grant it were the figne of our profeflion, what were then to prove that profeflion muft be before baptism? fure, figura & significatio sunt natura, the figne and thing signified, are of the fame continuall, one empioce before another : Here is in this argument another circumfance , that baptism is frequently put for doctrine : therefore doctrine muft go before baptism, nay rather, then baptism doth teach : for that which is any where translated metaphorically, muft have reffemblance with the primitive fignification : as if a man fhall call his son the flafe of his age, the son muft fustain his father in his feeble condition, though I do not know how any of these jades do prove any fuch thing, that baptism is taken for doctrine, otherwife then materially, as in Acta 10. 47. John is faid to preach baptism : fo is he faid to preach repenitance . As for Mr. Tombes Argument from witchcraft, which he confuteth, I leave even judicious Reader to think what he pleafeth, as not being worthy the condefideration of a Divine ; and thus I conceive Mr. Tombes Argument answereid. Come now at laft, to minne own Arguments for Infants baptism.

Those that in mans judgement ought to be esteemed fit for the kingome of God, are by man to be admittid to the priviledges of the kingome, vize baptism; but all infants in mans judgement are to be esteemed fit for the kingome of God, therefore all Infants muft be admittid to the priviledges of the kingome, Math. 19. 13.

I have already difcussed this point, Chrift findeth fault with his Disciples, for not fuffering little children to come, and faid not, I know these are the kingome of God ; but telleth his Disciples, not only they, that were brought, but fuch as they, and that not only fuch as they in his estimation, but their view, otherwife there had been no ground of a rebule, but commendation : rebules be i[n]ftructions for the time to come, at leaft, it is not well done ; do fo no more; when you fee any fuch as they, fuffer them, and forbide them not. You fee the precept for the future is general, men do not use to reprove but to the purpose, that the thing reproyed be no more done ; therefore the Disciples were to effimate note not them only, but fuch as they were (and that in an affigned liftenesse, namely, in that they were little children) as fit for the kingome of God, and upon that ground suffer them to come to Chrift. If thefe and the like had only been fit for the kingome of God in the estimation of Chrift by his omniscience, here had none been master of proof, but commendation : Chrift would then have faid rather, ye did well to forbide the little children to come to me, for you do not know whether the kingome of God doth belong to them ; neither can I give you any direction concerning other children for the time to come, because you cannot tell to whom the kingome of heaven doth belong ; however, let thefe come ; for I know the kingome of heaven doth belong to them, and fuch elect children as thefe are ; but ye fee Chrift doth rebule them, and thereby giveth them directions for the time to come, which he could not have done, if the liftenesse had been in fecret, and things only known to God.

Bu[...]e here Mr. Tombes and Mr. Blackwell, and others, will tell me, by this rule, Turks children, and Infidels may be brought to baptism. If any will bring them, and affume the inftru[...]tion of them in the doctrine of the Gofpel, I know not but they may : and if Turks would part with their children to Christians, I think it were a very charitable thing to do : For, the promife was never fo tied to Abraham's loyenes, neither for ought I know, to any believers, but to education of the family of Abraham, or any other believing family.

But they will further fay then, by the fame reason are they to be admittid to other benefits, namely, to hearing of the Word, and the other sacraments : Anfw. I fay, they are admittid to the refidue of the Ordaces of God, as foon as nature or grace do make them fit for them, they may have right before they can fee them : they are first admittid to come to Chrift for a bleffing, before they are capable of inftru[...]tion and preparation for the sacrament of the Lords Supper, is charged as a duty, which is no where charged on the parties to be baptiz'd.

2. That Sacrement, that requireth no preparation in the infubject, is to be admittid to every infubject ; but baptism is a sacrament to be admittid without any preparation in the infubject, therefore baptism is to be admittid to every infubject, every perfec, all nations.

That Sacrement that in the figne and signification, is preparative to all other grace that is to be admittid without any preparation of the infubject : but baptism in the figne and signification is preparative to all other grace, therefore it is to be admittid without any preparation : the major is true, or otherwife there would a process in infubjects, if that which were preparative to all other graces fould have preparations to that, and that muft have other preparations ; and so in infubjects. The minor I fhall prove out of Scripture, and plain reaon drawn from them : Gal. 3. 27. as many as are baptiz'd into Chrift, are put on Chrift : This doth probably prove, that men that are baptiz'd, are baptiz'd into Christ, which could not be affirmed, if they were in Christ before baptism; they could not be said to be baptized into Christ, if they had been in Christ before, which, if faith and repentance must be manifest before baptism must be affirmed, that believeth and is penitent is in Christ without doubt.

Object. But some men will say, may not man believe before baptism?

Reply. I answer no, he cannot, until Christ baptize him with the Holy Ghost. Now, Christ baptizeth when he pleaseth, either before, in, or after ministerial baptism.

Object. But, if Christ hath baptized him before, what need the Minister baptize him?

Reply. Christ's baptism is not known to the Minister, whatsoever confession of faith is made, he must therefore baptize, in obedience to the command of Christ, and leave the baptism of Christ to him.

How would the Anabaptists influe in the cleareness of such a text? And here I cannot but note a notable infidelity of the Anabaptists, I will not say how common with other heretics, when they cited a Text, and put a gloss upon it without any respect to the argument of the place, they profondly cry the Scripture is all case, crying down all the labours of the learned that is spent, through never so truly and piously. For the clearing of the Text, that is Tongues, that is Art: gives us Scripture; we have the Scripture, and then we can carry away the people, take heed that no man speake you through Philology and vain deceit, and this shall serve their turn, to anfouill all they understand not. If a man tell them that Philology is conuerteant about nature, and such things of creation as are too lowe for the things of faith, and therefore have principles contrary to doctrine of faith, as out of fleshing, nothing is made; and therefore make the fifth matter eternall, contrary to the doctrine of the creation, from a privation to an habite, no renum, that which is dead cannot live again, contrary to the resurrection; but Logick is without any instance of its own, but teacheth men only how to find out the truth of any discourse, written or spake. Oh, then Logick is nothing but falacies, and here many fallaciers conuent with them to hide their own ignorance, whereas indeed Eulogius is no part of Logick, unless you will say, no reason is reason: it is true, Logicians do mention fallacies, as a man may teach a young wooner what faults he may commit, whence some ignorant man may affirme, that the skill of such a trade was only in faults, as some do, who only count Logick fallacies; and here they have such foolishnes, to make the world believes, that reason was an Aise to their fancy, that men may wonder at them, they can flew how foolish a thing Logick is, they can prove a sheep have eight legs, two before, and two behind; two on the right side, and two on the left. My Logick can do more then this, and yet we shall be both fools if we want Logick, to know this is no Logick: Yea, I can prove a sheep hath fifteen legs, by setting him between four men, one before the sheep, the other behinde him, and on each side one; this sheep will have four legs before one man, and four behinde, &c, which makes fifteen, for naturals have no absolute nature before and behinde, may be the same thing in different respects, the same foot is before, and on the right or left side; this Logick can differ yet well enough, without the help of a fool to finde at that he knoweth not. I impugne not this to Mr. Tombes, but to the ignorant, that cry, all is their own by such a wile as this, as though none did regard Scripture but they, and all the Scripturis were clearly theirs, what was spoken against them, was against Scripture, set by human authority and tradition.

First, in the figure it is preparative to all purgacy, it is washing for much faith as much as crafis of years to submit to baptism is necessary, without which the Apostles could not have baptiz'd; but faith and repentence whereby the heart should be purged, that thole must be had before the party may be baptiz'd, is an execration of the figure, and frustrateth the signification: it cannot be denied that faith and repentence are required to the efficacie of baptism, but subsequent to the Sacrament, the water doth sacramentally wash away faults: to Ananias Act 22:16, faith to Paul, Why caried thou strake and be baptiz'd, and wash away thy sinnes? Now wathch doth implice nothing in the subjection of penitence, the blood of Christ cleaferneth us from all sinnes, 1 John 1:7, all the vices of the pungation is in the blood of Christ. Now can any man say that the blood of Christ cannot purge unlesse the party be purged before? If faith and repentence were required before baptism, then baptizal could not offer the blood of Christ to purge sinne, because the party were cleafered before baptizing, then Ananias could not have fail'd. Be baptiz'd and wash away thy sinnes, but wash thy sinnes first, and then be baptiz'd. Act 15:9, 10. Peter sheweth that fathode purifie the heart. Now it is true, fathode cleafer the Word and Sacraments, and maketh one and the other effectually, but both Word and Sacrament doe propode Christ, the Word to the ear, Sacrament to other fencis; Baptism doth represent the blood of Christ wasshing, and fencis doth leade on the wasshing of water, and faith on the pungs amned. Now the word is propode to the ear, so water is tendered, and the body wassh'd with water, whence fathode collect's the purgation of the foul from the testimony of God; water is no more the immediate object of fathode then the word: it is the authority of God in the word that is the object of fathode, as likewise the blood of Christ in baptism; they that believe, and they that believe not, heare the word, and it is no propounding of the word to preach it to any infidell, neither is it any propounding of baptism to baptize an infidell; yet it is hard to make him heare patiently that in no measure doth believe unfe feare, or in defect of them fong alittelit of the Civil Magistrate doth occurre; so that baptism is but an offring of the purgation by the blood of Christ to the eye and the body, as the word doth to the ear, and may be rendered as the ward to all Nations, the power of the one and the other is by faith in Christ conveyed unto us in the sacrament of baptism or the word; baptism cannoe worke as baptisme till after administration, whatsoever is said of it before is but the expectation of the world; the washing of water doth sacramentally strengthen our faith no duty of preparation charged on any, no man ever reprehended for receiving baptism unworthy; though the Minister hath baptisme charged on him as part of his duty, yet never any caution given to Ministers in general, or to Titus or Timothy to take heed that they baptize no unworthy persons, nor any finne or punishment charged on any Minister for baptizing any rashly or without due examination; no precept concerning any difference, but baptise and teach all Nations to the end that they may become the Disciples of Christ. Now where no Law is there is no transgessio[n]; when God doth not charge himme how dare any man call him to say this of that is himself? if any preparation be required let the scripture bee shewed where that was taught, where baptism was deferred till any competent preparation were made; what scripture is directed to the catechism, may any one sentence of scripture be applicable to them, that is not applicable to Christians at all times, as well as before baptism? Baptisme is a religious rite which men are easily perwaded out of principles of nature to embrace as may be seen in all idolatrous worshipes, they have their religious rites which they are perwaved come from the appointment of their gods, upon which ground they receive them. Now that God did appoint baptism is no abuse, and so we must tender it to Nations by the appointment of Christ, which though they receive but as infidell doth the word; yet when faith committeth they make use of it. Therefore the Apostles argue to move reuercie of life from baptism already received. So Romans 6, 3-4, 5. St. Paul argueth what use wee should make of our baptism; namely, that we should rise with Christ; but though the most noble way of arguing be from causes, and therefore in the Sacrament of the Lords supper, where the worthy receiving of that doth depend on an antecedent cause, their faith is said to obtaine the whole vertue of the works, John 6, 35. I am the bread, he that committeth to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst, 47. He that believeth hath everlasting life, 5, 1. He that eateth of this bread shall live for ever: Whereby he plainly faith, That he that believeth eateth my flesh, this bread which is my flesh sacramentally, and made much to me by faith. Never any such doctrine as this, he that believeth is baptised, because no doctrine is exact precedent to baptism, in reference to the Gentiles. See all the Epistles to the Rom, Corinthians, and the rest, all are written to Churches already baptised. Paul declared the whole counseil of God, and yet not one word what should be the carriage of the Catechism, or the Ministers towards them, as if he should suppose none under the right of the Gospel that will not first bee baptised, and received by the commandement of Christ:

b6 sceptical Exercitation.

Christ: so he that will teach any thing in Sc. Pauls Epistles, they must teach them to the baptiz'd to whom they are directed; as for the Catechism, nothing is written or directed either to them or concerning them. As for those histories of the A. &c. the greater part were Jews in Covenant with God already; unto whom Peter did indeed preach repentance in reference to that bloud that they were guilty of in killing the Lord of glory just preparation to baptism, but repen[t]ance and baptism are both exhortado unto as precedent to baptism, but repen[t]ance whereas if such preparation had been needfull to baptism, Peter shoud have stayed for the gift of the Holy Ghost to manifest their finnells, or else given them some directions by which they might manifest their finnells, or shew their repen[t]ance and faith, which he never did. St. Luke doth indeed say, They that gladly received the word were baptiz'd, but that they ministr'd it any way but by receiving baptism gladly doth not appear; and this was ground enough for an Historian to say they gladly received the word, wherein they were exhorted to be baptiz'd when they were gladly baptiz'd.

As for the story of Cornelius that was indeed a pure Gentile. Though Peter had commission enough to have gone to him by the command of Christ, Mat. 18, 29, and to have baptiz'd him and taught him the commandments of Christ, yet it is plane Peter did not understand the Commission, therefore God for Peters owne satisfaction, and the satisfacion of them of the circumcision, was placid in all that story to have before Peter in a mimescous way; Peter was to faire from baptizing of Cornelius, but he was hardly perwaved to go to him or preach to him, but as God do go before him by ministeres, which when they of the circumcision saw, the rest faith, they were afforsid. And of this very story St. Peter, Act. 15, and other places maketh use of to satisfie the Jewes touching the calling of the Gentiles: but this was the mercy of God during the infancie of the Church to use such extraordinary meanes for the drawing off the Jewes from that ceremoniall diffindition that God himselfe had put betweene Jewes and Gentiles, but in the orderly administration God sent the Holy Ghost, though by extraordinary meanes, yet in a reasonable time when first he had rendered the meanes of A. &c. that came fearfully upon them when they had occasion to sic them, and after had been baptiz'd; but the Holy Ghost promisid in v. 8. as promisid after Peter had preached repentance and baptism; may on many after they were baptiz'd, Repent and be baptiz'd, and ye shall receive the holy Ghost; shewing that preaching and baptizing are but the tenders of grace, neither the one nor the other of any force unlesse the Holy Ghost come. Now though the manner of the giving the Holy Ghost be different, yet the action is according to the way of Gods diffinicion, God will have outward meanes first tendered, and after he will blisse it where he pleasheth, among which outward meanes these are chiefie, if not all can ought to be used by way of censure baptisins, and teaching, which is all that is rendered in the communion, whatsoever it is babilized to the contrary: baptisins is set before teaching the commands of Christ, as I have formerly manifested; and indeed, it were a strange thing for the sacrament of baptisins to be rendered to men that were already clean, and approved, declared and manifested to be clean: it is true, it may be rendered to men that professe their faith, because man cannot judge them faythfull, norwithstanding any professeion, and therefore baptise them; but if they could know and judge them faythfull, they might give them the cords supper, in which all Christ is communicated, and baptisins should not be needfull. Baptisins is the seal of the tender of Christ, and of the purging power of his blood; not of our communion or partaking of Christ, that is sealed in the other sacrament.

Now to come to the signification, it is preparative to all other graces, it signifieth regeneration; and therefore it is called regeneration, John 3.5. Except ye be regeneracye by water and the Spirite, ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven. Now, certaintly the Holy Ghost would not fayth the grace of baptisins by regeneration, or nevairtho, if any grace had been preparative to it, it is not poossible that any life or motion shoulde be imagined before regeneration: It is true, in John 3.5. Except ye be born by water and the Spirite, unless ye be by water and the Spirite, that which we translate born, is γενηθεις, and Γενηθεις. Baptisins is called βαπτισμος, the laver of reg-nation. Lett men may vulgarly imagine, that men are faythfully begotten by the Word, and were to remaine some time in their mothers belly, the church, before they were brought forth by baptisins: during which time, they were to be catechisms, and made fit to be received into the Church: that word which is translated born, John 3.3 in 1 Cor. 4.15. is translated begotten. I have begotten you through the Golde: For, there it is γενεσις, and indeed, there can be no imagination of life before there is a being, before begetting: it is true, adventus must have fayth, such as it is, natural, humaine: before he can be baptizet, he must be willing by some inclination or other: it were barbarous to baptize a grown man against his will, which could noe be gotten but by faine-kinde of credence, though it might be put with than to punish him with death that shoulde refuse it, as it is with God to punish with overall death, such as despite baptisins; yet that Ministers shoulde refuse to baptise any man that shoulde desire baptisins, until he hath fayth fayth, is to require actions of life, and crafon from a man before he were begotten, or cleanness: and purity before he were wassified. Again, that sacrament that was administered unto all the churches of the Gentiles in the Scripture mentioned, without any mention in the Scriptures, of any preparative grace that might fayl be the symbol of the first grace, and preparative of all other graces: But baptisins is fayl, therefore baptisins is preparative to all other graces. Let all the Epistles of the Apostles be searched, and ye shall finde they were all written to baptizet persons, that they are full of exhortations to fayth, and somtimes arguments drawn from baptisins, not to move them to repentance and newnesse of liffe, Rom. 6.4. & 1 Cor. 10.18. doth indeed tell them that they were buried by baptisins with Christ, but what doth he collect out of that? therfore rebete and believe, but doth he at any time, speaking of fayth, believe and rebete, they shoulde be baptizet? which the right method of having the doctrine of the Golde should have required, if fayth and repenteance had been preparatives; but I am confident, if any man shoulde rule on him to teach fayth and repenteance, as preparatives to baptisins, he shoulf either smite his Text, or draw that out of it that will not come: he will teach any doctrine other so much as may make them willing to be baptizet, and rebete them difficultie, and teach them as discipiles of Christ unbaptizet, and follow no Apoclepticall Preceptes or Example. That which is drawn out of the commission, is without ground, that reaching must go before baptisins, because συνεργονται, is set first: For, first, the phrase of the words is changed, συνεργονται προτερων, whereas had there been a methodical enumeration of things that ought to have been performed in order one before another, the first ought not to have been altered: it shoulf have been, παρενδεινονται προτερων, Go, teach and baptize; and therefore those that would gather any thing out of the order of the words, must be enforced to read them so, which the Text will not permit. Again, the word συνεργονται is in imperative mood, which standeth for a Future, whereas the words, baptizing and teaching what I command, are both Present. Again, this συνεργονται, ye shall make discipiles, is the end, and ought to be the first set down, and declared to those that shoulde employ of about the means, as I have formerly provyd, and so doth doth clearly manifest, ye shall make all the world discipiles, baptizing them, and teaching them whatsoever I command, which is as much as by so doing, ye shall make them discipiles, as if a man shoulf say fowling in fowling, making good choice of your feed and land, ye shall have a good crop: here is plainly intended, that these Particullar expressions, this fowling and making good choice shall be taken up for the men, and the crop is to be expected after, as the fowling and event of them: as for παρενδεινονται, from παρενδεινων, to learn, and therefore fomollect, that it doth imply a learning with profit, that is nothing to the preparation: if there be any thing in that, it is in the fowling, and it hath the vernaue of a promise, and is confirmed by God, limited and extended according to the good pleasure of God, Gal. 4.17. I am the Lord thy God, that teacheth thee to profit: Paul plante, Apollo watereth, it is God that giveth the successe; and if it shoulde stand in that sense as a preparation to baptisins in the communion, it must contain a manifest falsehood, or prove undeniably univerfall grace, if they shoulf teach with profit all nations, and baptize them; or at least, an univerfall nationall acceptance of the Gospeſſ, teaching with profit can admit of no milder ſenſe then that; and if every perſon muſt be taught with profit before he be baptized, then none ought to be baptized but the elect of God; and it were a fin for any Minifter to baptize any other but such as received profit by the word, the word worketh to the hurt of the reprobate whatſoever ſort of profit it may feem to have.

3. Reason. That doctrine that taketh away the diſtinction of the two Sacra‐ments, is a falſe doctrine; but Anabaptiſts doth take away the diſtinction of the two Sacra‐ments, ergo the doctrine of the Anabaptiſts is a falſe doctrine. That doctrine that requireth preparation to both Sacra‐ments, taketh away the diſtinction of the Sacra‐ments; but Anabaptiſts require preparation to both Sacra‐ments, therefore Anabaptiſts take away the diſtinction of the Sacra‐ments.

The difference doth conſift in this, that the Sacra‐ment of baptism is preparative to the Lords Supper, sacramentally giving that toun which we stand in need of to make us fit for the Lords Supper; i.e. sacramentally, not that God cannot or doth not take his owne time of calling ſometime before we are partaker of either Sacra‐ment; ſometimes after we have both Sacra‐ments; yet and after we have ſtatually prophaned the Lords Supper: but Sacra‐ments have their proper uſe and ſignification, and are as all other duties lyable to ſlufc. Wee muſt behafe our ſelves as men under the meaſes: we have our duſies charged upon us of God, whereof ſome are official, ſome perſonall belonging to every man's perſon, about the performance of all which, we may finne either by omifſion or miſture; but all the good that we receive by word or Sacra‐ments is of God: what we doe by way of office that lyeth charged on us by the rule that we receive from God, which is to baptize all Nations and teach them; the ſuccesse is of God, and the account of faith muſt be given to God; we can take ſome account of former worke, to wit, thofe that are external; but of faith and of ſuch worke as are immanent the thoughts of the heart, we can ſay nothing to them. Now the communion that is between Christ and us, is ſet downe in Scripture by Chrifls being or dwelling in us, and in him: we muſt firſt be in Christ before he can be in us: we write in Christ by election before the foundation of the world, and therefore may bee received into Christ before we can have faith; may we are faid to be baptized into Christ, Rom. 6.3. To many of you are baptized into Christ Jeſus, and the grace of baptism is faid to be wrought by the Spirit, by the Spirit are baptized into one body, 1 Cor. 12.13, and Gal. 3.27. As many as are baptized into Christ have put on Christ: Christ is ſaid to be conveyed into us by baptism, but by faith, Eph. 3.17. That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith: what is inſtrumentally ours by faith, is sacramentally ours by the Lords Supper: he therefore that catch Christ in the Lords Supper, Christ is in him. John 6.56. Hee that eateth my flesh dwelleth in me, and I in himbut Christ is never ſaid to be in us by baptism, but we are baptized into Christ; he is not baptized into us, but he is communicated imminced into us in the Lords Supper, for which faith is required as a preparation, and the habitation of Christ in us is acriled to faith as a meaſes as before, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; but our birth in Christ, or regeneration, a man be born by water and the Spirit: and to the Word, 1 Cor. 4.15. I have begotten you through the Word, but never are we faid, either to be born or be gotten by faith: the acts of faith, are growth, life, and fruit of ſanctification, Job 6.35. Thoſe that believe and come to Christ are faid to eat and drink Chrifl: For he that cometh unto Christ, is promiffed he shall never hunger; and he that believeth in him, ſhall never thirſt. And this vertue is acriled to the body and blood of Chrifl, from whence Divines do fully gather, that he that believeth, doth eat the flesh, and drink the blood of Chrifl, but no intimation in Scripture from whence any man can collect, that he that believeth, must first be baptized, unleſſe he be a pafſor: for he that believeth, muſt first be baptized by the Spirit, before he can believe; and thus are the graces offered in the facra‐ments, kept diſtinct, which otherwise would be the fame: that the grace of baptism is initial, that of the Lords Supper is perfective, which may further be manifested thus: our culing hath two parts, the proffer of grace and the acceptation of grace: proffered: The firſt is by the Word, the Spirit, and Baptiſte, the other is by the Word, Spirit, Faith, and the Lords Supper. I have here added faith, because the Scripture doth make faith an instrument by which we receive Chrifl: but Christ muſt be proffered to us by his Spirit and Word, before we can receive him, which is exprefſed in the word calling, as diſtant from authentication, and goeth before justification, in which we have the firſt act of faith, Rom. 3.10. Whom he predestineth, then he also calleth, where he calleth them he also ſatisfieth, we are not called by faith, but we are justified by faith, Rom. 2.28 and 5.1. Baptiſme is the feal and facra‐ment of Gods work in us, which had need to be moſt cleaſely manifested, and confirmed unto us, having moſt of God, and leaſt of us, that we might ſubmit to it, wherunto we are moſt averse: therefore what hath moſt of us in it, that pleaſeth us best: as works better then faith, and faith, as we look on it in our felves, as a qualification in moſt delighfull to us then as it is in its own nature, working humiliatiōn, teaching us to deny our felves, and reſt on God: men do uſe to magnifie faith, but too much under a falſe apprehension, even of fecreſie and liberty before men: faith is not a boſom quality, nor to be pleaded before men, but God; and this St. James, cap. 2. doth handle at large, ſhewing, that men are very inſatiable to ralle and boſil of faith before men, and rely on works before God; and heriſs the deceitfulness of our hearts is very great, when we conceive we deal with an heart-knoower, then we finde the things of faith apprehended moſt weakly of any thing: we can pleafe our felves better in the opinion of our works then of faith, but when we come to deal with man, we are fure we treat of colours before blind men,

An Answer to Mr. Tombes

William Hussey, 1647

men : there we can boldly call, we may speak as freely as travellers, we cannot be disapproved, whereby it cometh to pass, often times, that heart that is left upright, is met bold ; faith is indeed, in time of need, very heroic in her exploits, in that the affect by the power of God, but alzibeth little of her best affectus to her selfe ; she is always conversant with God, and therefore cannot but be conscious of much weakness and infirmity ; faith is so always laden with difficulties, that she hath very little to say of her selfe ; there must be great preparation on Gods part, before there can be any sens or feeling in man of the things of faith ; there must be the mighty operation of the Word and Spirit, and God is pleased to adde baptism too, for bath to work upon : these things are of mighty operation, and so they had need, considering the floth of heart that is in us to believe it is well, after the Word and sacrament of baptism, faith do come, God layeth it as a ground and foundation for faith to work upon, and accordingly all the arguments of Scripture are to raise us to walk worthy of amendment of life, and to rise with Christ, Rom. 6. as if it should be said, God had offered you grace in baptism, therefore accept of it ; ye are born anew in baptism, let it appear in your conversation.

Argument 4. That which maketh the admission into the Church merely arbitrary, that is a false doctrine ; but the doctrine of Anabaptists maketh admission into the Church merely arbitrary, Ergo, the major is plain for that nothing is more directly contrary to the service of God than will-worship, but denying any that are received according to the mind of Christ in the Word, and requiring such baptism in the party to be baptized, as the Minister pleaseth, without any rule from Gods Word, is to make the publicke service of God, or at least a great part of it, wholly arbitrary ; and this doth appear to flow from their doctrine : not yet any man durst affirm what was the measure of faith to be required how much he must believe that must be baptized, by means of the whole matter dependent on the will of the Baptizer, a thing most contrary to the nature of Religion ; it was imagined that the Holy Ghost would have been so fluent in giving rule for the Ministers to walk by in the trial of the faith of the person to be baptized if any such charge had lain upon his office. He must baptize believers only, saith Mr. Tombes, and the Anabaptists, but no Scripture directeth what, or how much he must believe ; must it be as much as the Minister shall think fit, then some Ministers will baptize with very small trial, others will be very hardly satisfied : some will baptize as soon as the childe can be taught to say he believeth in Christ, others not till ten or twelve, others twenty years of age ; wherein no man can either satisfy his own conscience, or any reasonable man ; for that he walketh without rules, neither doth this difficulty from this doctrine come from accidental misconstruitions or phantasies, but inevitable necessity from the doctrine it self, that the Minister must baptize none but believers ; yet cannot tell how much, or what he must believe before he be fit for baptism, unless he walk by rules of man, making, without any intimation from Scripture.

3. That

5. That doctrine that giveth man that power which is divine, that doctrine is blasphemous and false ; but the doctrine of the Anabaptists giveth man that power which is divine, therefore the doctrine of Anabaptists is blasphemous and false.

That doctrine that giveth man power to judge of faith in another, that doctrine giveth man that power that is divine ; but the Anabaptist giveth man power to judge of faith in another ; therefore the Anabaptist, that power that is divine.

Faith is in the heart : with the heart man believeth to righteousness, and with the mouth he confesseth to salvation, Rom. 10.10. He therefore that judgeth of faith, must judge the heart which is proper to God. Lete Lord try the heart, Jer. 17.10. Neither will it serve his turne to say, that he judgeth by rules of charity if this change lay upon his office : to judge charitily is one thing, another to judge ex officio ; for the judgement of charity can never pronounce the person to be judged as he is as judged by charity to be : judgments of charity are not always true, if it be possible we have warrant enough to judge it to be charity : if children may possibly be such as the Kingdome of heaven doth belong too, wee may in charity judge them such : but if we are tyed by our office to baptize none but believers, it will not serve turne to say, wee judge them such by charity, to prove that we must baptize none but such as are believers, seeing we may by charity judge many believers which yet are not believers : against judgement or faith is denied to belong to the Apostles themselves, nor that we have dominion of your faith, 2 Cor. 1.14. If God had appointed Ministers to judge of mens faith before they had baptiz'd them, he would have given them some rules by which they shoud have been able to walke, which he hath not done, he hath annexed baptism to the Ministers calling to let men know that the grace of baptism cometh immediately from Christ, therefore he sent the feast of baptism calling that came immediately from him, but hath pretermitt these officers of his no speciall qualifications whereby they had ability to discern the faith of men more then other men have, the judgement of charity, is not a Ministeriall qualification that belongeth to every man, and is no Ministeriall qualification.

6. That doctrine that denieth the interpretation of the promise made to Abraham which S. Paul maketh that is a false doctrine, the doctrine of Anabaptists denieth the interpretation of the promise made to Abraham which S. Paul maketh therefore the doctrine of the Anabaptists is false. Those that deny the bleffing of Abraham, and in him of all the Nations of the earth, for the Godfiff preached to Abraham in reference to the Gentiles after their call, deny the interpretation that S. Paul maketh of the promise made to Abraham but the Anabaptists deny the bleffing of Abraham, and in him of all the Nations of the earth to be the Godfiff preached to Abraham in reference to the Gentiles after their call, therefore the Anabaptists deny the interpretation made to Abraham which S. Paul maketh the words of S. Paul :

are plain, Gal. 3.8. the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the Gospell unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all Nations be blessed; where ye plainly S. Paul affirmeth the promise to Abraham to be the Gospell, and the Nations to be converted Gentiles; and that in the promise made to Abraham, there was a Prophetic of the conversion of the Gentiles; and the Gentiles under the Gospell had Abrahams blessing, that is a blessing to them and their seed, as Abraham had to him and his seed: So that it is apparent that those which deny the blessing to the seed of the Gentiles, the blessing of the promise, deny Abrahams blessing to the Gentiles, which is directly to deny the interpretation of St. Paul concerning Abrahams blessing, and to deny that the blessing to Abraham was the Gospell, or that the promise was a Prophetic of the conversion of the Gentiles under the Gospell; all which things are plainly affirmed by S. Paul.

7. That doctrine that denieth the benefit or grace of circumcision to be offered in baptism, that doctrine is false: but the doctrine of Anabaptists is a doctrine that denieth the benefit and grace of circumcision to be offered in baptism; therefore the doctrine of the Anabaptists is false. That doctrine which denieth what St. Paul affirmeth, is a false doctrine; but that doctrine that denieth the benefit or grace of circumcision to be offered in baptism, that doctrine denieth what St. Paul affirmeth, therefore that doctrine denieth the benefit and grace of circumcision to be offered in baptism, is a false doctrine.

The place wherein St. Paul doth affirm that we have the benefit of circumcision by baptism, is Coloss. 2.11, 12. Let the argument be weighed, I have spoken to it in my answer to Mr. Tombes. In the which verse St. Paul affirmeth they were circumcised, that was not literally true; therefore he affirmeth in a figurative or metonymical sense, figur pro signate, the thing signified by circumcision; and he further frowseth, how the benefit they were partakers of had resemblance with circumcision; circumcision did cut off the body by a synecdoche, part for the whole; but they put off the whole body, but it was the body of sin. Now this is done by the circumcision of Christ; it was this circumcision of Christ that made the circumcision of our fathers of any virtue: this had been as true of the Patriarches, that they were circumcised in putting off the body of the sinnes of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ; whereof their legal circumcision was but a type, and Christs circumcision did put an end to that circumcision; yet the Colloians were circumcised in Christ: how could that be? the text plainly falleth, they put off the body of the sinnes of the flesh, and that was their circumcision in the circumcision of Christ; it was the benefit of circumcision to the Jews, which they had though they wanted the ceremony. Now all this benefit commeth unto you by being in Christ, get but into Christ and all is done; to putt off the body is dyes, Christ dyest, if ye be in him, all that he did ye did; he was circumcised, ye are are circumcised; he died, ye die; if in him; thus were your fathers in Christ by circumcision: to ye are in Christ by baptism, buried with him in baptism: no thing can be plainer than the grace and benefit of circumcision was offered to the Colossians in baptism.

That doctrine that refuseth to hear and obey the rationall and manly phrase of the doctrine of the Gospell, and reduceth all to the sensitive and childish delivery of the Law, that is an unfaithfull and disobedient doctrine; but the doctrine of Anabaptists refuseth to hear and obey the rationall and manly phrase of the doctrine of the Gospell, and reduces all to the sensitive and childish delivery of the Law, therefore the doctrine of the Anabaptists is an unfaithfull and disobedient doctrine; God was pleased to deliver the service, which consisteth in ceremonials and outward performances in such manner, that every external was directed to them the length, height of their Temple, and of every thing that was contained therein, it sheweth that God would be the author of all things in his worshop: The colour, length of the curtains, of their altars, and every carved thing, were directed immediately by God; the place where the Temple should stand: If we should rigorously look for particular rules in this kind, as those Anabaptists do in point of baptism, look for the like direction for administration of baptism, as of circumcision; and fixe warrant therfore, to neglect what the Holy Ghost hath said concerning the nature of baptism, and giving direction to have it administered to all nations, thereby leaving the precept or duty of baptizing without any lawfull use, for want of such sensitive and particular direction as they had under the Law, we might be condemned for will-worship, for building Churches without a pattern and direction from God, how high, or how long they should be, together with many things of the like nature; refuse to pray publicly or meet to serve God because he had appointed no place: the truth is, what they say against baptizing of Infants doth conclude against any baptizing at all: For if the particular afflication of the persons to be baptiz'd must be disdained by any qualification, for want of any such direction, we shall be enforced to leave all unbaptiz'd: Baptize all nations, faith Christ, and Actz 2.41; three thousand souls were added: Actz. 1.12, men and women; these may comprehend all male and female, without necessary inference, that they were grown men and women.

Now, if we leave this sensitive and childish way, and walk by the reasonable sense of Scripture, how clearly doth the Scripture give satisfaction in this point, I pray you observe? First, Christ doth command to baptize all nations: Secondly, he refleeth, that the promise belonging to any, doth entitle him to baptism, Actz 2.39. Thirdly, that the promise is the same to Abraham, and the Gospell preached to the Gentiles, Gal. 3.8. that the promise was to Abraham and his seed; that baptism doth circumcise us by ingrafting us into Christ, Col.2.11, 12.

By what rational excuses can we excuse our selves for disobediences to the commands of Christ, commanding us to baptize all nations; if we refuse any, that by a nationall covenant are brought unto us?

8 That doctrine, which under pretence of walking by Scripture, support all their doctrine by fallacies, and false arguments, that doctrine is erroneous and false; but the doctrine of Anabaptists is such, I do challenge all the Anabaptists, and in particular Mr. Tombes, to produce any argument against Infants baptism from Scripture, or found reason, that shall reasonably conclude from the words without any addition or subtraction, or may agree with the sense and argument of the words produced, then I shall account Mr. Tombes his scruples more tolerable; in the mean time, I will he might receive satisfaction, and spend his time in confirmation of his weaker brethren.
